DENIES MRS. RANTOUL DIVORCE

LAW CANNOT STOP TANGO

WILSON'S PLEA FOR FREE TOLL REPEAL

WASHINGTON, March 5.—President Wilson's appearance before Congress today for a personal appeal calling for the repeal of the free tolls clause of the Panama Canal act was the sixth time that he has addressed the joint session of Congress in the year and the day that he held office.

As usual on occasions of this kind, the galleries were filled. The throng began trooping toward the Capitol from all directions long before noon, and the usual challenges and disputes with doorkeepers blocked the corridors at intervals for an hour before the President's arrival. Every one of the prized tickets of admission was used.

With the exception of the diplomatic and executive galleries, where there were a number of vacancies, every seat in the House gallery was occupied by 12:30. Miss Margaret Wilson, accompanied by Mrs. Hall and Commissioner of Corporations Davies and Mrs. Davies, occupied seats in the executive gallery. Miss Eleanor Wilson also occupied a seat in the executive gallery.

Secretary of State Bryan, following his usual custom, did not go upon the floor, to which he is entitled, but proceeded to the diplomatic gallery, where he took a seat beside the German ambassador.

APPPLAUSE FOR PRESIDENT.

In the diplomatic gallery were seated Ambassador and Mrs. Jusserand, Minister Pezet of Peru with Mme. Pezet, Count Von Verzatorf, the German ambassador, in civilian dress.

Vice-President Marshall and the Senate members, walking two by two, marched into the House chamber at 12:35. The Vice-President took his place upon the rostrum and the Senators took front benches.

Senators Kern, Gallinger and Swanson, and Representatives Underwood, Mann and Fitzgerald were named by Vice-President Marshall and Speaker Clark as a committee to escort President Wilson into the chamber.

The President arrived in the House

FIVE MORE AMERICANS ARE SLAIN

MEXICO CITY, March 5.—Eighty Japanese marines, armed with rifles, each man carrying much ammunition and wearing khaki uniforms, have been parading the streets here. No reason has been given for the military display.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Dr. J. H. Wittigenstein, a naturalized American physician, is here from Mexico. He will today report to the United States government the deaths of five Americans—two girls and three men—slain in Mexico. He says:

"Rebels in Zapata's command attacked the home of E. F. Bender, an American farmer, six miles north of San Juan, Sinaloa, at night. They set fire to the barns and house. As Mr. Bender's two sons rushed out of the house they were shot dead.

"Defending her sick husband, Mrs. Bender killed one of the invaders. She dragged herself to San Juan and organized a rescuing party, of whom I was one. We saved Mr. Bender, but his home was burned and all his property stolen. His loss is $30,000.

"Dr. W. Smith was a practicing physician in the State of Chihuahua. He was killed by rebels in Villa's command by accident. His daughter, aged seventeen, and his niece, aged twenty, were carried off by the rebels. 'A week later their mutilated bodies were found.'

Dr. Wittigenstein was himself stabbed four times by Mexicans. He was shot once.

"Ritual Murder" Frenzy Spreading; Two Plots Foiled

BERLIN, March 5.—The "ritual murder" frenzy in Russia continues to be worked up.

In Malin, Kiev, a Jew just managed to escape from a "ritual murder" charge that would have created more excitement than the Beilis case. Two Russian anti-Semites, it is reported here, tried to throw a murdered Christian boy into a Jewish rabbi's house. The body had thirteen wounds. The conspirators were caught and arrested.

In Kayini, Lodz, a Jewish man named Jacob Steinman caught a young Russian thief who had tried to rob him. The boy yelled out that the Jew wanted to kill him for religious purposes, and the Christians started a pogrom against the Jewish inhabitants.

Melba Is Not Ill and Is in Boston

A report from New York that Mme. Melba is ill in Springfield and will sail for Europe next week, cancelling her Boston engagement, is not true. Mme. Melba is at the Copley-Plaza, and declares over the telephone that she is not ill and has no intention of cancelling her Boston engagements. She sings for the first time Saturday afternoon in "Boheme" and appears next week as Juliette in "Romeo and Juliette." She will probably sing at other performances later in the month.

File Demurrer in Mellen's Behalf

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., March 5.—Demurrers alleging insufficiency of the complaint in the manslaughter case against Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven road, were filed in the Criminal Superior Court today by Homer S. Cummings, counsel for Mr. Mellen, who announced that Judge Tuttle would be asked to assign a time for a hearing on the pleadings.

Report Revolution Raging in Brazil

LONDON, March 5.—Revolution has broken out in Brazil, according to dispatches received here today. These stated that martial law had been proclaimed by the government in two provinces and that the revolutionists were marching to besiege Rio Janeiro, the capital. At the Brazilian legation it was admitted that martial law had been declared over a large section of Brazil, but that this was incidental to the presidential election.

1 DEAD; 6 HURT ON STEAMER

One member of the crew of the Cotswold Range, a freight liner from Rotterdam, was killed and six other seamen were injured, three of them seriously, in a terrific storm at sea last Friday. The story of the tragedy and how officers and men risked their lives to rescue the six injured seamen was told by Captain J. W. Blance when the liner docked in Boston today. The ship was five days overdue.

H. Picterse, sixty-five, with a widow and thirteen children living in Rotterdam, was hurled against the woodwork and instantly killed. The seriously injured seamen were M. W. Littlejohn, seventeen, an apprentice, Seaman Larsen and Seaman McLaughlin.

Captain Blance headed the rescuing party. At the peril of their lives they bore the six men to the captain's cabin. Here Blance set their broken bones, the work being difficult as the ship was being wrecked like a baby's cradle. The next day the captain treated the men's wounds with better results as the storm had abated.

Picterse was buried at sea.

Declare Mrs. Arlin Knows Where Long Lost Daughter Is

Mertie Arlin's mother knows where she is, and has known where she is from the beginning, according to dispatches from Colebrook today. Ada Blodget, Miss Arlin's cousin, who has been in Colebrook on a visit, and who has been constantly with Mrs. Arlin, said:

"Mrs. Arlin told me that she knows where Mertie is, and has known where she is all along." She did not attempt to explain why Mrs. Arlin offered a $500 reward last week for evidence leading to the girl's recovery. The reward was offered for last week only.

Mrs. Blodget says: "Mrs. Arlin knows where Eleanor is, and Dr. Rogers knows where she is also. Dr. Rogers is a Boston relative of the family. Dr. Rogers opposed Mrs. Arlin's going to Boston to look for her daughter, and said it would be a waste of time and money."

PAUL HUNT SUES HIS SISTER

Mrs. Mabel Hunt Slater, the Back Bay society leader and the "Lady Bountiful" to thousands of mill workers at Webster, was sued today by her brother, Paul Hunt, for $250,000 just as she was leaving Boston on a trip to Japan with her two daughters, Misses Esther and Ray Slater.

There was some mystery about the nature of the suit. The first notice came in the filing in the Suffolk Registry of Deeds of an attachment for a quarter of a million dollars. The suit is an action of contract, but beyond this no information was given out by attorneys in the case.

"It's a huge joke—that's what it is," exclaimed Mrs. Slater as she stepped into her limousine to be whirled away to Trinity place, where she took the Twentieth Century Limited at 12:30 o'clock.

"There is absolutely nothing to this matter," continued Mrs. Slater. "I really don't know what Paul is driving at. I am not running away from anything.

"My trustees will take the matter up with his attorney. The only thing is that the suit has upset me a bit, coming as it does right on the verge of my departure for the Far East. No papers have as yet been served on me."

MISSES PROCESS SERVER.

A large number of society folk saw Mrs. Slater and her two daughters off on the train. From Mrs. Slater, who is the widow of Horatio Nelson Slater, founder of the Slater mills at Webster, they learned of the suit. Later they declared that the society leader had successfully eluded a process server who had gone to the South station in the belief that she would take the train there. It was explained that failure to serve papers on Mrs. Slater would not affect the suit.

When a reporter reached Mrs. Slater's Winter home at No. 448 Beacon street she requested the newspaperman to call up her attorneys, Whipple, Soars & Ogden, and notify them to have a representative at Trinity place to be on hand in case a process server appeared.

"I don't want to miss my train," said Mrs. Slater.

Mrs. Slater noticed an AMERICAN photographer near.

"Come on and get in the picture," she said to her daughters.

Then she noticed several of the servants standing on the sidewalk.

"Get in here and have your pictures taken," she called to them.

"Come on, Murphy," she addressed one of them.

But Murphy balked. A few minutes later Mrs. Slater from the limousine door said:

"Be sure, Murphy, and see that everything is in tiptop shape at the house while I am away."

"Sure, ma'am," said Murphy, waving a farewell.

MYSTERY IN SUIT.

William G. Moseley, counsel for Mrs. Slater's brother in his suit, said today:

"I am not at liberty just yet to say what the suit is. My papers are not ready. It was prepared very hurriedly as Mrs. Slater is leaving today for Japan. Papers are now in the hands of the sheriff for service. There is no personal service on Mrs. Slater, but it was thought best to begin the action before she left the country."

Attorney Sherman L. Whipple of counsel for Mr. Slater said:

"I am not yet at liberty to discuss the case."

Paul Hunt lives in Cambridge and is wealthy in his own right. Not long ago he purchased Mrs. Slater's Milton property from her.

A. A. Adee, Another Bryan Aide, to Quit

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Alvey A. Adee, for more than thirty years Second Assistant Secretary of State, intends to resign this Summer, it was learned today. His resignation will be voluntary on the ground of age and physical disability. He is the oldest employe in point of service in the State Department, and it is conceded that he has more knowledge of the routine and precedent of the department than any other official.

The resignation of Secretary Adee following the retirement of Counselor Moore will greatly handicap the department.

HUSBAND VICTOR IN RUMRILL BATTLE

Mrs. Lois Rantoul's plea that she be divorced from Edward L. Rantoul was today denied by Judge Hardy, and he filed his decision in the Middlesex courts.

Mrs. Rantoul, granddaughter of the poet, James Russell oLwell, accused her husband of cruelty and abuse, but admitted on the witness stand that she herself loved with a "Heaven-sent love" Chester Chapin Rumrill, a millionaire. Rumrill, Rantoul and Mrs. Rantoul move in the highest circles in Boston.

Mrs. Rantoul received the news that she had lost her suit with a smile. "I was as ready to lose as I was to win," she said gently. Rantoul likewise was pleased at the verdict. He has repeatedly said in the trial that he still loves his wife—that he would be glad to have her return to him.

Attorneys on both sides were out of town, and it was impossible to learn what legal steps will next be taken; but among those most familiar with all the facts there was a feeling that a reconciliation is highly possible.

Besides the question of divorce, there are two other prime issues. One is the question of how Mrs. Rantoul shall live, now that her provisional alimony automatically is stopped. The other question is what will become of the children.

THE REAL MASTER.

Under the provisional agreement indorsed by Judge Hall when the first trial of the suit ended in Mrs. Rantoul's physical collapse, the custody of the two children was divided between Rantoul an dhis wife—Mrs. Rantoul having the right to direct every detail of their lives. But since the divorce has been refused Rantoul becomes technically "master of the house," and can undoubtedly, if he will, demand that the children be returned to him.

What then will Mrs. Rantoul do—and what will Rantoul do? Will there be another legal move? Or will the attorneys and the friends of the two move to bring them together?

Rantoul still oves his wife. Does she love him? She was not asked this question at the trial. Perhaps it would have seemed ridiculous, since she sought divorce. Yet the testimony has shown her to be an extraordinary woman—a remarkable woman. And it is not impossible that in her heart still lingers a tender

Where Prosperity Meets Enterprise Every Day

In the "Want Ad" section of the Boston American, under the head "Business Opportunities," worth-while propositions are matters of daily offering.

And these propositions find the right sort of takers—men who invest both money and faith and often personal energy in the enterprises that appeal.

Oftentimes the few hundred dollars which stand between a business and prosperity are supplied through the potency of the "Business Opportunities" column.

This channel has well been called a link between prosperity and enterprise. And those whom it profits are those who follow it closely—inserting a "Want Ad" of their own when they are seeking some special proposition.

They simply put their requirements on paper and leave with any of the American's "Want Ad" stations, the branch office at 264 Washington street, Main office at 30 Summer street, or of William S. Benton, appointed by Venustiano Carranza, supreme chief of the revolution, has arrived here and will review the findings of the alleged court-martial independently of the Anglo-American commission, the work of which has been retarded by diplomatic technicalities.

The new commission is composed of General Eudon Fruoto, president, Dr. Miguel Silva and Miguel Lara. They expect to begin work today to ascertain, according to their instructions, whether the arrest and conviction of Benton were according to due form of law and justice. Unless some flaw in the proceedings is discovered, they are not expected to exhume the Briton's body.

The Anglo-American commission meanwhile is inactive, waiting instructions from Washington.

The Carranza commission has also been ordered to investigate the Bauch case.

This action was taken after receipt of a report from General Villa regarding the disappearance of the American.

Villa's report stated that Bauch had been put in jail at Chihuahua on suspicion of being an agent of an unfriendly interest. Villa adds, however, that the American had been released, and that since then he had been unable to locate authorities had been unable to locate him. He promised continued efforts to obtain more information about the disappearance.

Governor Colquitt of Texas has given Mexican Federal authorities for the requisition of Apolonio Rodrieres and the five Mexicans charged jointly with him with the kidnaping of Clemente Vergara, an American citizen. The requisition is based on a charge of horse theft. Vergara afterward was killed.

'INTERVENTION IS INEVITABLE," SAYS ARIZONA SENATOR

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Breaking the long "embargo of silence" placed on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by President Wilson, Senator Smith of Arizona today declared that intervention in Mexico is inevitable. "It seems to say this," he said, "if it were not simply as my personal opinion. But intervention is the only solution, and will—I assume it with Secretary Bryan when he appears before the Foreign Relations Committee."

The Senate revolt against the Wilson "watchful waiting" policy has become more and more open. Senator Smith declared that Great Britain has hastened the crisis in Mexico.

"After reading the speech of Sir Edward Grey," he said, "it becomes evident that the United States must either surrender the Monroe Doctrine or take some steps to prevent the reign of terror. Inactivity in the face of murders and outrages is abhorrent."

REBELS GET NEW GUNS; PREPARE TO ATTACK TORREON

CHIHUAHUA, March 5.—With the arrival of news from Juarez that the long-expected shipment of arms for the Constitutionalist forces had reached there, it was intimated at General Villa's headquarters that the attack upon Torreon would begin tomorrow or Saturday.

The artillery division of Villa's army was busy today trying out the new field pieces that have just arrived here.

Dispatches were received today announcing that a Federal filibuster band had captured Casas Grandes. The Federals were led by the Quevedo brothers and Jose Orozco.

WARNS LAZY HUSBANDS

Must Support Families.

JAIL FOR THRIFTLESS

SPRINGFIELD, March 5.—Shiftless husbands have been warned by Judge Wallace Heady, recently elevated to the bench, that they will be punished if they do not comply with the orders of the court.

He said that lazy husbands would be committed to the Hampden County Jail, where they will not only be required to labor, but to contribute fifty cents a day for the support of their families. He sent Denis Duval to jail on an old charge of non-support. His family will receive fifty cents a day.

Germany Orders Army and Navy Officers to Mexico

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Germany today took a hand in the Mexican tangle, when three of her officers were ordered to leave at once for Mexico City. They are Captain Boyed, the naval attache; Captain Frans von Papen, military attache, and Baron Kurt von Lersner, the second secretary of the Legation.

The diplomatic corps at Washington was surprised, as not since the Spanish war has so many members of a Washington legation been ordered to the front.

The last announcement from Germany was of her determination to send machine guns to guard her legation at Mexico City.

Baby Abandoned in Back Bay Church

A baby girl—about five weeks old, according to expert guessing—began life anew at the Charden Street Home today, with a church baptism to her credit. She was found in the vestry of St. Cecilia's Church in Belvidere street in the Back Bay at 9.30 at night. The baby was dressed more expensively than is usual in such cases.

Father Supple baptized the little waif, who was then given to a policeman to be taken to Back Bay police station and thence to the Charden Street Home for the night.

FLOCK TO HEAR HOUSE DEBATE ON POLICE ROW

Anxious to hear more concerning the "first Massachusetts man who ever defied the Civil Service Commission and got away with it," citizens flocked to the State House early this afternoon.

The man who refused to carry out a suggestion from the Civil Service Board is Police Commissioner O'Meara.

Documentary evidence submitted by Representative John J. Jennings of Ward 20 showed the House that in January of last year the Civil Service Commission had made up its mind that competitive examinations must rule thereafter in the promotion of Boston policemen.

O'Meara demurred, and, as the climax of a series of letters, in May intimated that he would resign if the Civil Service Board, acting under its "legal" right, insisted on competitive examinations.

The O'Meara method is to pick the officers who, he feels are worthy of promotion; and to limit the examination to these picked men.

Confronted by the threat that the Boston Police Department would be left flat by O'Meara if the Commissioner was deprived of the privilege of picking candidates for promotion, the Civil Service Board quit.

Debate was resumed late today on the Cummings bill providing for competitive examinations.

U. S. Must Absorb Mexico, Declares James B. Connolly

PROVIDENCE, March 5.—"We grabbed Panama, and the next step will be Mexico. Both are necessary for the making of the North American people into one great nation which will have to fight the inevitable struggle with the yellow race for the mastery of the world," declared James B. Connolly, war correspondent and writer of sea stories, before the Catholic Club.

"The men of the United States Navy are being trained and drilled day and night for the greatest struggle in the history of mankind, the war of the white and the yellow races. When the clash comes this nation will have to bear the brunt of it, and our farseeing naval men are preparing for it.

"The North American people must be one nation and this country must absorb the others to consolidate the people."

LINER BADLY DAMAGED BY TERRIFIC SEAS

With every lifeboat swept clear, two of her six compartments flooded and damage running into the thousands, the British steamship Indianola, under charter to the Hamburg-American Line and captained by W. A. Price, made port today.

"February 26," said Captain Price, "we were caught in cross seas such as I never dreamed of. No sooner would one board us forward than another would come over the stern. Ninety-eight tanks of chemicals, lashed on the deck, were washed overboard, all our lifeboats were swept away, three hatch covers are gone, the cargo and stores damaged, the crew quarters knee deep in water, so that they slept in the engine room, and conditions indescribable. At one time, looking down from the bridge, I could see the decks level to the bulwarks with water, and ten sections of hatches afloat in the welter."

Call $400,000 Frick Van Dyck Mere Copy

MILAN, March 5.—The Corriere Della Serra states that the portrait by Van Dyck of Paola Arodno, which Henry C. Frick of New York recently bought for $400,000, is a copy of the portrait of the same fair woman in the Palazzo Risaa, Genoa. The pictures are similar but, says the Corriere, critics agree that the Genoa one is much superior.

BOSTON MAN SAYS WOMAN FLEECED HIM

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 5.—Miss Madeline W. L. Curtis, forty years old, who says she is a spiritualist, was arrested here today on a warrant charging her with having fleeced Edward I. Ripley, a wealthy retired business man, formerly of Boston, of stocks and bonds worth $15,000.

Miss Curtis said she at one time was engaged to marry Ripley, has a power of attorney from him and would prove the charges false. The police say she was indicted for embezzlement in Wilmington, Del. It is charged that Ripley shipped the securities from Boston to Wilmington in a trunk. In Wilmington, the police say, the trunk was rechecked to Philadelphia, where Miss Curtis is said to have deposited the securities with a trust company.

Hill Refers to Wife on Price of Milk

At the hearings on the Ellis milk bill this week before the legislative committees on agriculture and public health one of the committeemen asked Arthur D. Hill: "How much do you pay for milk?" Mr. Hill replied with suave irony:

MRS. ELWELL IN TEARS AT STORY IN LOVE CASE

Mrs. Alma Stewart Elwell, Sunday school teacher and choir singer of Medford Hillside, wept, with bowed head and heaving breast, in East Cambridge Divorce Court today while Charles Duffy, a private detective from Salem, testified as a witness for her husband, John E. Elwell, who is seeking divorce on statutory grounds.

Mr. Elwell has named Dr. Joseph Christie, his former neighbor at the Hillside, and the husband's suit is not contested by the wife, so far as the allegations go. She merely seeks custody of their five-year-old boy Almot.

Detective Duffy testified to "shadowing" Mrs. Elwell and Dr. Christie from October 3 to 20, 1913, to her spending evenings at the Christie house, to her leaving Dr. Christie's once or twice "with dishevelled hair," to their theatre and shopping trips and especially to one time when he watched Mrs. Elwell and Dr. Christie together in the Elwell home.

When Duffy came to the description of what he saw he was called to Judge Hardy's bench with counsel, so spectators would not hear. Counsel tried, at the opening of court, to get a secret hearing, but Judge Hardy said that, as in the Rantoul case, anything unfit for spectators could be told at his bench, but he would not bar the public from the courtroom.

MANY HEAR WHISPERS.

It happened that Detective Duffy has a high-pitched voice, so much of what he said could be heard by those nearest. A few feet away on the same bench were the following people:

Dr. Christie.

Dr. Christie's wife, who returned to her own home in Taunton several months ago, and who is now a witness for Mrs. Elwell.

Mrs. Elwell.

Mrs. Elwell's brother, Marchmont Stewart of Medford Hillside.

Mr. Elwell was close by, at his counsel's table. In the spectators' benches were friends of both Mr. and Mrs. Elwell, with many women associates of the latter.

STORY OF DETECTIVE.

Duffy said, up to his private testimony:

"I was engaged by Mr. Elwell to shadow Mrs. Elwell. I did so from October 3 to October 20, 1913. Dr. Christie met Mrs. Elwell by appointment at the church while her husband was in Portland. They took dinner together. She spent several evenings at Dr. Christie's house until 11 p. m. with only the hall light burning. She came out of Dr. Christie's office and ran home with dishevelled hair late in the afternoon on one or two occasions.

"They went to the theatre together and went shopping together. Mrs. Elwell was frequently at the Elwell home."

Then Duffy came to his story of watching the couple and of what he saw. He had been let into the apartment of Mrs. Sanderson, who lived in the same house, to watch, as Mrs. Sanderson testified later.

Returning to the stand after his story at the bench, Duffy said that on February 12, last, Mrs. Elwell called at 1524 Beacon street, Brookline, where there is a sign "Dr. Christie" out front, that she went in and that he saw her and another woman talking in the parlor with Dr. Christie. Later he saw Mrs. Elwell ironing in the kitchen.

URGED CLEMENCY.

Duy had apparently brought Mr. Elwell to the Elwell home to confront his wife and Dr. Christie, for he was asked what talk took place after he and the husband came. Duffy said that Elwell said to Dr. Christie:

"I am through with her."

Then Duffy said that Dr. Christie replied: "Remember, John, she's only a woman. Don't be too hard on her."

Mr. Elwell, who preceded Duffy on the stand, said that he had dressed, fed, bathed and put the baby to bed ever since the boy was sixteen months old. Often he had to stay home, he said, and get the Sunday dinner while his wife and mother-in-law were at church. He gave her all his pay—$150 a month—and bought his own clothes from Christmas money. Coming to the issue he said:

"I told Dr. Christie not to call again. He said it was not fair of me to say that to him unless Mrs. Elwell was present.

"I told Mrs. Elwell not to go to Dr. Christie's office any more. She said I couldn't stop her from going.

THREATENED TO SUE.

"Dr. Christie threatened to sue me for defamation of character.

"In March Mrs. Elwell told me she had lost her latch-key and wanted another.

"One Sunday last October Mrs. Elwell went to church to sing at evening service. I was stalling home, but Tillie, the maid, came in and I gave her the baby and went to the church. My wife was in the choir. Dr. Christie was in the church. The minister was preaching on the Ten Commandments.

"When he came to the one on immoral living, he dilated upon it for five or six minutes. During the sermon I saw Mrs. Elwell smile down from the choir on Dr. Christie. They didn't see me and they went home together.

"On August 16 Mrs. Elwell went to Lowell. The next day I went there and found on the register of a hotel, in Dr. Christie's handwriting, as I thought, the entry 'Dr. B. H. Jackson and wife, Boston.'"

DENY PLEA OF MRS. RANTOUL FOR DIVORCE

ness for her husband. So a reconciliation may be possible.

Mrs. Rantoul saw a reporter today at her home, in Jamaica Plain. As he approached the house, a carriage drove up with tre two Rantoul children, returning from their private school, and Mrs. Rantoul fet them, and kissed them tenderly, and sent them on to the house, then walked down the path to the gate to meet the reporter. She was calm, stilling timidly, and had evidently already heard of the Judge's decision.

"READY TO LOSE."

"I was as ready to lose as I was to win," she said, before the reporter asked a question, and then in answer to his query added:

"My lawyer is out of town and till he returns I can say nothing as to fly plans."

Judge Hardy's action came as a surprise, as it was not believed he would hand down his decision within two weeks.

Attorney Thomas W. Proctor, counsel for Mrs. Rantoul, was in New York today and could not be reached.

The dismissal of the libel came very quietly, and the only spectator was an AMERICAN reporter. The trial ended yesterday following arguments by Attorneys Proctor and Thomas Hunt, counsel for the husband.

The last trial was the most sensational in the divorce annals of the East Cambridge court, and lasted nearly two weeks. In this time prominent society people of Boston and the North Shore took the stand, but the chief interest in the unfolding of how the domestic drama of the Rantouls was shattered were the husband and wife and Chester Chapin "Chippie" Rumrill, whom Mrs. Rantoul called her "God-sent love" and for whom she openly confessed her affection.

BOTH WERE PLAYED.

In their summing up the lawyers flayed both husband and wife and Rumrill. Attorney Hunt, who was declared today to be out of town and "invisible," excoriated Mrs. Rantoul, calling her a "false, lying woman" and asked Judge Hardy not to give her a divorce.

"She herself conceived the scheme of trying for a divorce," said the lawyer. "She wanted to get rid of Mr. Rantoul. Perhaps she might want to marry Rumrill."

BIRRELL MAKES OPENING PLEA FOR HOME RULE

LONDON, March 5.—While Liberals and Nationalists united in cheers for the government, the Irish home rule bill was introduced for first reading on its third passage in the House of Commons this afternoon.

The galleries had filled early in anticipation of stirring scenes and the patience of the men and women who arrived several hours in advance of the opening of the session was rewarded.

The outburst that followed the introduction of the measure that will give Ireland self-government was unique in the history of Parliament.

Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, presented the measure, having been chosen for that duty as a mark of respect by his colleagues. Prolonged cheers greeted Birrell as he arose, and he was interrupted frequently several times in the course of his brief speech. Several Unionists members showed their disapproval by leaving the house while Birrell was speaking.

The Irish secretary gave no inkling of the compromise which Premier Asquith is expected to offer on Monday.

The Daily News and Leader prints this morning what purports to be the Government's final offer to the Unionists.

According to the writer, the much talked of scheme of "home rule within home rule" has been dropped because, among other things, the Unionists made it clear that they would not accept it. The Cabinet has now agreed to go to the furthest limit toward the temporary exclusion of Ulster from the control of the Dublin parliament.

Mystery in Lights and Wide Open Safe

A ghost with a taste for illumination visited Purchase street last night and left a haze of mystery behind him.

Patrolman Sheehan found No. 111 Purchase street lit up from top to bottom, but could make no entrance. F. L. Young occupies the building as a dealer in paints and oils. The patrolman tried to get in, could not, summoned two sergeants, and at length got Mr. Young on the telephone and won permission to break in a window.

Entering they found sixty-two electric lights and a gas log burning. The safe door was open. No watchman was in sight. Mr. Young, summoned by telephone, said that nothing had been stolen. The safe's contents were intact.

Boston Labor Market Still Below Normal

The condition of the labor market for the month of February as viewed from the State Free Employment office, is still below normal, although there was an increase of .013 per cent. in the demand for help over the previous month. The increase was perceptible in the industrial lines especially for factory girls. The average daily demand for help was 64 as compared with 75 in 1913 and the average daily number of positions reported filled was 51 as compared with 57 in 1913.

POLICEMAN IN BROCKTON MAY GET A MILLION

BROCKTON, March 5.—How would a man feel if he inherited an unexpected million after spending years tramping a policeman's beat?

Patrolman Jesse Appleby knows, for he believes himself co-heir, with two brothers, to the $1,000,000 estate left by Charles D. Appleby, who amassed wealth in Alaska and died recently in New York.

The police officer is confident he can establish his relationship, although his father had been believed dead for many years. Appleby has gone to New York to put in his claim.

Newspaper clippings first gave him an inkling that the will was his father's. He corresponded with New York authorities, and papers that arrived yesterday made him determined to start a more thorough investigation.

Judge Hardy Retires Witness as Drunk

It was at Judge Hardy's divorce court, East Cambridge. Man called as witness wobbles forward.

Counsel (sharply)—"Take the stand."

Witness steps up, shakily.

Judge Hardy: "Pretty early in the morning to be drunk, isn't it?"

Witness (inquiringly) "Do I look drunk, Your Honor?"

Judge—"For a witness, I should say that you did, exceedingly drunk.

Judge (to counsel): "This is a pretty way to bring your witness here."

Counsel: "I'm sorry, Your Honor, but I can't control the habits of my witnesses."

Judge (to witness): "Step down, and see that you reform before you come into this court again."

'UNEMPLOYED' INVADE ST. PAUL'S LED BY SWIFT

Over 100 members of Boston's so-called "army of the unemployed," led by Morrison I. Swift, marched into the Cathedral of St. Paul's, Tremont street, after a meeting at the State House.

Swift asked the sexton if he could see Dean Rousmaniere, but was told that the dean was leaving for Providence.

So Swift wrote on the back of a hymnal the following letter:

"Very Rev. E. S. Rousmaniere:—

"Dear Sir:—We came as a body of unemployed to ask you to do something immediately toward the relief of the unemployed, because no public agency of any kind has yet been moved to do so. Many men need food and lodgings.

"Can you not organize a free restaurant or form a bread line?

"We suggest further the providing of a sanitary lodging house, because the city Hawkins street house is insufficient and repulsive.

"This is an emergency and we therefore urge you to head a movement among your people to do something now. The State cannot get into action before great suffering shall have been endured. Sincerely,

"MORRISON I. SWIFT."

Then the party marched away.

SUES GIRL AND HER FATHER TO FIND HUSBAND

Miss Harriet Weir and her father, Robert Weir, of Newton Centre are named as defendants in a $20,000 alienation suit, on file today in the Suffolk Superior Court. The suit is brought by Mrs. I. Bassi of Randolph.

Mrs. Bassi, who was formerly employed by the government as an immigration interpreter, charges Miss Weir has deprived her of the aid, comfort and support of her husband, Vincent L. Bassi, and that Weir, knowing that Bassi was a married man, encouraged the latter's attentions to Miss Weir.

In her interrogatories Mrs. Bassi asks Miss Weir when she first met Mr. Bassi, and the times and places when she was in his company between February 15, 1912, and January 1, 1914.

Plaintiff inquires whether Miss Weir or her father bought, boarded or kept a dog at their home for her husband in 1912 or 1913. She also asks Miss Weir if she asked her to let her husband get a divorce in order that Miss Weir might marry him.

"Where is my husband now?" asks Mrs. Bassi. She further inquires as to when the defendant last saw him or heard from him.

SUES GIRL AND HER FATHER TO FIND HUSBAND

Miss Harriet Weir and her father, Robert Weir, of Newton Centre are named as defendants in a $20,000 alienation suit, on file today in the Suffolk Superior Court. The suit is brought by Mrs. L. Bassi of Randolph.

Mrs. Bassi, who was formerly employed by the government as an immigration interpreter, charges Miss Weir has deprived her, of the aid, comfort and support of her husband, Vincent L. Bassi, and that Weir, knowing that Bassi was a married man, encouraged the latter's attentions to Miss Weir.

In her interrogatories Mrs. Bassi asks Miss Weir when she first met Mr. Bassi, and the times and places when she was in his company between February 15, 1913, and January 1, 1914.

Plaintiff inquires whether Miss Weir or her father bought, boarded or kept a dog at their home for her husband in 1913 or 1913. She also asks Miss Weir if she asked her to let her husband get a divorce in order that Miss Weir might marry him.

"Where is my husband now?" asks Mrs. Bassi. She further inquires as to when the defendant last saw him or heard from him.

Connecticut Peach Crop First 'Ruined'

NEW YORK, March 5.—Query from New Haven correspondent today: "Connecticut peach crop ruined?" This is positively the first time this or any other peach crop has been ruined for 1914. Delaware and Maryland correspondents are beaten to it.

KILLING CAMBRIDGE BILL SHOWS LOGIC IN REFERENDUM DEMAND

If Mayor Barry of Cambridge used unparliamentary language, in telling Senator John P. Brennan of the University City just what His Honor, the Mayor, thinks of the present Massachusetts Senate and its methods, there are two things to be remembered.

First, there is no record that Mayor Barry ever before lost his temper in public.

Second, the Mayor of Cambridge had a perfect right to resent in any manner in which the honorable Senator had disposed of a bill giving the people of Cambridge the referendum on the question of a hospital site.

When the Mayor of Cambridge began talking turkey to the Senator from Cambridge, the honorable Senator had just been guilty of killing that capital referendum bill without debate and without a roll call.

Please get the significance of these last few words, "without debate and without a roll call."

The same bill had been passed by the House of Representatives on a roll call vote. In the House, that is to say, everybody had to stand up and be counted. One hundred years from now the Cambridge folk of that day will be able to see just who, in the House of Representatives of 1914, voted for, and who against, the hospital referendum.

Today you cannot find out who stilled the bill only yesterday. All that anybody knows is that the bill was killed, and killed in a cowardly manner.

There was the item, on Page 3 of the Senate Calendar, reading like this:

S58. Bill (H.) relative to the establishment of a hospital by the city of Cambridge. (Under 2,500. 28).

The bill has been amended by the House in section 2, () inserting after the word "by" in line 2 the words "general authority to take that part of the river front and the sewer at Captain's Island for hospital purposes."

The Senate President: "Question comes on ordering the bill to a third reading; all those in favor say 'Aye,' those opposed 'No.' (Business of pause while Senators murmur something.) The 'Noes' have it, and a third reading is refused. Next matter on the Calendar is," etc., etc.

Not a Senator arose in his place to "respectfully doubt the vote and ask for a division," much less a roll call.

And so the Cambridge Hospital referendum came to its death in the State Senate "at the hands of persons unknown."

Does anybody wonder at the increasing demand in this Commonwealth for the initiative and the referendum?

This Cambridge proposition was that the citizens might choose between taking part of the Captain's Island playground for a city hospital or spending $61,000 for the "Doyle" site, so called.

The Cambridge City Council has voted once in favor of spending the $61,000 for the specified site. Mayor Barry has vetoed the order. The Mayor holds that the city is overburdened with public playground sites and—because fully one-fourth of all Cambridge realty is untaxed—is in no position to buy private property which must necessarily be lost to the assessors.

In which situation the Mayor and his friends—notably Representative Henry J. Mahoney—came to the Legislature to insist that the question be referred to the people.

Representative Mahoney twice fought this proposition through the House of Representatives. He won his first battle in the absence of Representative John L. Gilfoy, because of which absence it was agreed to reconsider the vote and debate the matter all over again. On the second occasion the roll was called, everybody was placed on record, and the referendum bill won.

Now, the referendum has been stabbed to death in the Senate by unknown Senators.

The Republican Senate of 1914 cannot afford to take the responsibility for this affront to the Mayor and the people of Cambridge.

There is more than a suspicion that the gentlemen who assisted Senator John P. Brennan to "turn the trick" are Democrats. If this be the case, the Republican majority in the Senate should enjoy piecing these Democrats on record, and the Republican party might profit from the exposure. If there are Democrats in the Senate who are not willing to trust a matter of this sort to the people of the Democratic city of Cambridge, through the Democratic method of the referendum, their Republican brothers should turn them up.

In connection with which observation it may not be out of place to say that an inspection of the House roll call will reveal the fact that many Democrats who talk loudly at times of their full faith in the people turned their back on the referendum in this instance and voted boldly in favor of the $61,000 proposition of the distinguished Cambridge Common Council.

Men in the confidence of Governor Walsh declare it to be the Governor's purpose to go among the people of the Commonwealth next Fall not only to give an account of his own stewardship, but to tell them whether he was lulled or opposed by their Senators and Representatives in the General Court.

This reported plan of the Governor has to do only with the PARTY name, the pledges of the Democratic platform. The Governor will bring into it nothing personal. If Democratic legislators choose to differ with his Excellency on personal matters, the Chief Executive will have no quarrel with them.

Democrats, however, who go astray on such propositions as the Constitutional Convention, the submission of the Initiative and the Referendum Amendment to the people, and the like of that, may expect to have Governor Walsh appear in their districts next Fall and tell their friends, neighbors, supporters—and opponents—just where he found them, or how them, in the crisis.

The Republicans in the lower branch of the Legislature have not been so well organized in six or eight years as they are this year. Blessed with such seasoned leaders as Beck, Bonfield, Cox, Ellis, Washburn and White, the Republicans present a solid front to the Democratic opposition.

Up to March 5, 1914, that Democratic opposition is an opposition without such leadership.

If all the Democrats stand by the pledges of last Fall to the people of the Commonwealth—not through every item goes down to defeat by Republican votes—it will not be difficult to go to the people again in the Fall of 1.14.

WILSON BEFORE CONGRESS, ASKS TOLLS REPEAL

at 12:37 o'clock and was greeted by loud applause from the legislators and the throngs in the galleries.

The applause for the President in advance of the reading of his message continued for thirty seconds. As it died out Speaker Clark made the simple announcement:

"Gentlemen of the Senate and House: I present to you the President of the United States."

A TENSE SITUATION.

The President began the reading of his brief address, which he finished at 12:42, while the entire assemblage arose and his partisans applauded.

Throughout the reading of the Presidential view on the canal matter, however, the situation in the chamber was tense and silent. Not a member attempted to applaud or signify disapproval of any of the phases as they were pronounced in measured tones by the chief executive. At the colose there was no indication as to whether the sentiment of the address had been favored or not. The tribute of applause was such as has always been rendered the President addresses Congress.

Republicans and Progressives seemed amused at the situation. Democratic leaders were nervous and apparently much worried at the possibilities for their party which the day's events might bring.

Speaker Underwood and Speaker Clark of the House, with Chairman Adamson of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, listened unmoved to a doctrine which they have publicly declined to accept. There was much whispering among Democrats before the President arrived as they looked about at the crowds in the galleries and realized that a split was in the breach in the ranks of the majority party during the Wilson administration was being displayed to the public.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

That the President would have his way was taken for granted even by the older leaders of the opposition.

The President's address follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress:

I have come to you upon an errand which can be very briefly performed, but I beg that you will not misjudge it because of the number of sentences in which I state it. No communication I have addressed to the Congress carried with its graver or more far-reaching implications to the interest of the country, and I come now to speak upon a matter with regard to which I am charged in a peculiar degree by the Constitution itself with personal responsibility.

I have come to ask for the repeal of that provision of the Panama Canal act of August 24, 1912, which exempts vessels engaged in the coastwist trade of the United States from payment of tolls, and to urge upon you the justice, the wisdom and the large policy of such a repeal with the utmost earnestness of which I am capable.

In my own judgment, very fully considered and maturely formed, that exemption constitutes a mistaken economic policy from every point of view, and is, moreover, in plain contravention of the treaty with Great Britain concerning the canal, concluded on November 18, 1901. But I have not come to you to urge my personal views. I have come to state to you a fact and a situation.

"THE LARGE THING TO DO."

Whatever may be our own differences of opinion concerning this much debated measure, its meaning is not debated outside the United States. Everywhere else the language of the treaty is given but one interpretation, and that interpretation precludes the exemption I am asking you to repeal. We assented to the treaty; its language we accepted, if we did not originate it, and we are too big, too powerful, too self-respecting a nation to interpret with too strained or refined a reading the words of our own promises just because we have power enough to give us leave to read them as we please. The large thing to do in the only thing we can afford to do, a voluntary withdrawal from a position everywhere questioned and misunderstood. We ought to reverse our action without raising the question whether we were right or wrong, and so once more deserve and get the confidence, the amity and the redemption of every obligation without quibble or hesitation.

I ask this of you in support of the foreign policy of my administration. I shall not know how to deal with other matters of even greater delicacy and nearer consequence, if you do not grant it to me in ungrudging measure.

REPEAL ACT INTRODUCED.

Within an hour after President Wilson had called upon Congress to act Senator Chilton of West Virginia this afternoon introduced a bill to amend the Panama Canal act and permit the repeal of the clause exempting American coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls. The text of the provision reads:

"The President is hereby authorized and empowered by proclamation to make, suspend, alter, change or abolish any tolls contemplated or provided for by this act and may prescribe tolls to be charged in any case I nwhich tolls are prohibited herein."

Jap Premier Quits Over Naval Cut

TOKIO, March 5.—The Japanese Premier today placed his resignation in the hands of the Mikado. HEARST-SELIG NEWS 'MOVIES' IN FULL SWING

NEW YORK, March 5.—The rather novel fact that a press association or news-gathering organization has entered the motion picture field has become known in New York with the first appearance of the Hearst-Selig pictorial, a motion picture reel of current news events produced by the International News Service in collaboration with the Selig Polyscope Company of Chicago.

The International News Service has heretofore confined its efforts to furnishing newspapers with telegraph new of the world and news photographs, as well as numerous newspaper features. Having successfully invaded every branch of the newspaper field, the International News Service has now given further evidence of its enterprise by entering into the motion picture game.

Staff motion picture photographers have been attached to every branch under the control of the International News Service. A staff motion picture photographer represents the International News in Washington; staff photographers are assigned to the cities of New York, Chicago, Boston, Atlanta, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

In addition to these staff men, who in one or two of the larger cities number several, the International News Service is represented by motion picture correspondents in every city of importance in the United States. Staff photographers also represent the International News Service in Europe and every important quarter of the globe is covered by a motion picture correspondent.

In presenting this motion picture reel it is the plan of the International News Service to make up a newspaper in moving pictures illustrating every important story of the day—a reel of educational value as well as of news interest.

A staff correspondent represents the International News Service on the Texas border, where General Villa and General Carranza are engaged in rebellious activities against the Huerta administration in Mexico. A staff motion picture correspondent recently returned from Mexico City where General Huerta and his staff officers posed especially for the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

PASTOR TELLS OF "FOUL" NEW ENGLAND TOWN

"Don't preach ex-team theology in country churches to people who come in automobiles," declared Rev George K. Leighton, superintendent of Universalist churches in New Hampshire today, before the second day's sessions of the Country Church Conference in the First Methodist Church.

"Many a minister goes into the country from the city," continued the speaker, "imagining that country people are ignorant. They read more than the city people. Many of them are college bred. Now what the church in a country town wants is to get back on its job. It should look after that town official who gets his position by a generous distribution of hard cider and cigars before town meeting day.

"I could tell you of one of the foulest places in New England. It is a town of about five hundred. Nearly every one in the town has been arrested. A self-respecting farmer does not put his sawdust in that town. Not one of the clans in that town has escaped the law.

"Will law make that place better? No.

"Put your church there. It should be consistent with its leadership as well as efficient. Teach people the principles of sanitation. Give them the right sort of amusements and plenty of them."

Rev. Rockwell H. Potter of Hartford, Ct., told how the federation of churches had reformed that city again the Mayor. Rev. Thomas Chalmers spoke of conditions in New Hampshire.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove dandruff, stop itching scalp and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While, clapp, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

SAVE YOUR HAIR! IF FALLING OUT OR DANDRUFF—25-CENT DANDERINE

This brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing the entire destruction of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—anytime—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that fluffy, lustrous appearance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, and you will be delighted with the way it will be after just a few weeks' use. Moreover, you will actually see new, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

First Autocar Did So Much For Their Business They Bought Another

The Pureoxia Company Find It Easy Now to Make Deliveries in Places They Could Not Reach With Horses, Operating Expenses Reduced

IT IS interesting to note the transformation of "skeptics" on the subject of motor delivery into enthusiastic devotees once they have tasted of its benefits. Both large and small concerns pass through the stage of doubt and hesitation in taking up the question of forsaking old-established methods for the new. Some, after deciding to make the experiment, unfortunately buy the wrong car.

But others, who properly investigate and properly purchase, are converted permanently to motor delivery. John Wanamaker, who bought his first Autocar Delivery Vehicles five years ago, has been buying more at intervals ever since. He has now 110 Autocars. Adams Express Company, with 188 Autocars, has discontinued the use of horses entirely in some of its important territories, notably Philadelphia.

So it is with smaller concerns—hundreds of them—who have adopted the Autocar and experienced its advantages. More than 60 per cent. of all our orders are repeat orders.

The Pureoxia Company, of Whipple Street, Boston, dealers in Beverages, bought their first Autocar, in February, 1913. After eight months' thorough test, they found its operating cost so low, its running qualities so dependable under all conditions of road and weather, and its business-getting ability so marked, that they added another Autocar last October.

"With these two cars," says the president of the Pureoxia Company, "we are reaching out all the time for new and valuable trade in the suburban districts. The cars show gratifying ability to finish their routes day after day without interruption. Together won us to motor delivery, particularly for suburban work.

"The mechanical construction of the car seems exactly suited for delivery work—it is easily stopped and started and it is easy for the driver to reach the seat—important details where many stops on a route are necessary.

We find that the cars complete their routes, no matter how long in remarkably quick time and that whereas our horses often used to be out until late at night, the Autocar are back in the garage by 6 o'clock.

"Considering the amount of ground they cover in a given time, the Autocar is more economical than the horses it would take to do its work. But the more important question is the new business the cars secure and the way we are pleasing our customers in the outlying sections by being right on the minute with their goods when they want them."

What the Autocar is doing for the Pureoxia Company, it can do for YOUR delivery system. At the chassis price of $1850, we have the best Motor Del very Vehicle, in this country, bar none.

NORTH ADAMS, March 5.—James Deery, a the nineteen-year-old boy charged with shooting his sweetheart, Grace Reagan, with intent to kill her—she was saved by a corset steel which deflected the bullet—was expected to be arraigned today for disposition of his case in the lower court. RHEUMASALTSIS FINE FOR TORPID LIVER

Learn How to Secure Quick, Safe Relief

The liver is the largest gland in the body, weighing nearly four pounds. Its main purpose is to aid digestion and make glycogen for the blood. So it is important to keep it working right.

If your liver is lazy and your kidneys throb with a dull ache, you need the scientifically blended and chemically pure carbonated lithia drink called Rheumasalts.

Lame back, shooting pains, tired feeling, dizziness and nervousness simply mean that your liver and kidneys are clogged with impurities, and that poisonous uric acid is entering their work of filling the digestive functions and filtering the blood. Flush your liver and kidneys and set them working right by taking Rheumasalts in water for a few mornings.

Nearly all rheumatism, headaches nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness and bladder disorders come from torpid liver and sluggish kidneys. Take Rheumasalts. This delightful effervescent lithia drink helps the weakened kidneys and cleans out the stomach and eliminates toxins and poisons, and leaves the intestinal canal clear and sweet.

It is uric acid solvent as well as a saline laxative. Acts quickly, without griping or nausea.

The next time your liver and kidneys bother you or your back aches, ask your druggist for a bottle of Rheumasalts. It comes in 25c 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you want the genuine Rheumasalts send the price to the Rheumasalts Company, Box 142, Minneapolis, Minn., for a bottle.

'FANNY'S FIRST PLAY' OPENS AT PARK THEATRE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

It is not difficult to acquire a taste for Barnard Shaw and his sense of humor, though it is sometimes rather hard to keep pace with the philosophy he injects into his plays. "Fanny's First Play," which finally extricated itself from the rough weather in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, had a belated debut at the Park Theatre yesterday and set before you a new assortment of Mr. Shaw's quaint humor. It was humor extracted from ridiculous premises.

Mr. Shaw began by poking fun at the play critics of London, and after he had done this to his own satisfaction and to your complete amusement, he turned his attention to the middle class servility toward rank. Like the good Irishman that he is Shaw gave no quarter to his English characters. He hammered them mercilessly—but always in satirical good humor.

Naturally, "Fanny's First Play" was amusing, but even this excellent quality could hardly match the extreme novelty of the piece and the play—"Fanny's First Play"—you had an induction and an epilogue that supplied an intellectual feast. The play critics before and after taking place with an unknown dramatist's work.

SHAW POKES FUN.

The critics were a silly lot, as Mr. Shaw unquestionably intended them to be—possibly he resented his own feeling toward the craft. He made them comical enough for any mind, and convinced you that you leave the fate of any new play to their consideration would be too hazardous for the safety of the drama.

When Shaw pokes fun at institutions and individuals, he preaches—and when you read between the lines you could see him laughing as much at his audience as his audience laughed at him. That is Shaw. He manages to turn out a sharply pointed brand of comedy is what keeps you interested in his movements. He is inclined to write over the heads of his audience, and to follow all that he was driving at in "Fanny's First Play" required close attention to the dialogue.

In the play proper Mr. Shaw made no effort to spare the upper middle class Englishman. He sent the favorite son and daughter to jail, and made them proud of it. He pointed out the hypocrisy that lurks behind the mask of respectability and finished by having a Frenchman explain why one of his race was really the equal of three Britons in physical combat. He ridiculed the lack of respect that children display toward their parents, and on the whole, had a very lively time picking English institutions to pieces. As a fitting climax to his play, the mechanically trained butler of the middle class home turned out to be a duke's brother, much to everybody's uneasiness on the stage and everybody's delight in the audience.

USING THE HAMMER.

In the plainest possible way "Fanny's First Play" was Bernard Shaw using the hammer—a sort of "Indoor Sports" for the brilliant dramatist.

Granville Barker's London company presented the play in faultless fashion. Sidney Fairbrother, Kate Cutler Byron, Eva Leonard Boyne, Katherine Pole, Arnold Lucy and Dulce Musgrave performed certain of the models of class English folk; Ivan Campbell was almost too good a butler to be turned back to the nobility and Walter Kingsford made the most emphatic impression of the quartette of play critics.

"Fanny's First Play" was amusing—not riotously so, but amusing just the same. It was show in a humorous frame of mind.

Educated Ape at Bowdoin.

Alexander, the Great, is attracting attention to the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. He is a big African Jappenze that looks human, and from all outward indications is as close to human life as any of the ape tribe ever exhibited. Alexander is the property of Fred Hoses, who looks after him as a father watches his own child. This is necessary, they say, because Alexander is a valuable piece of property.

GABY'S GOWNS AND MUSICAL COMEDY WIN

Gaby came to town last night at the Shubert Theatre and the audience which packed the theatre to the last seat was most agreeably surprised. It had come to see only Gaby herself and her startlingly magnificent clothes.

Gaby was there with the clothes as her schedule has also brought with her one of the most unique and interesting musical surprises of the season, a modern dance-operetta called "The Little Parisienne."

She can sing and dance, can Gaby. She works hard and conscientiously to entertain, and she makes good. Her dancing of the "Gaby Glide" makes all the others you have seen dance it fade into the dark background.

An entire fashion magazine could be written around the hats and the gowns that Gaby wears during the show—a new gown every few minutes, and as for hats—well, there is a different — black, pink, white, round, square, and all six feet tall. There was literally a gasp of amazed delight from the feminine portion of the audience when Gaby first appeared. As for a mere man—he called in attempt to describe them.

Those who thought the show could be all Gaby and nothing else were fully ready to admit they were wrong. The show was two days late in opening, the storm having delayed Gaby's trunks somewhere, but even as a show itself, it was worth waiting for. Gaby has as her dancing partner Harry Pilcer, well known to Boston visitors as the dancing star of the "Follies" some years ago, and the dancing was full of hairbreadth escapes, seemingly impossible acrobatics. It was modern dancing at its best, the thirty-third degree and then some.

The musical comedy has the real atmosphere of Paris. It's different from the Broadway brand, and Gaby is assisted in it by Forrest Huff, Charles Angelo, Pittini Von Bosing and others, all of whom can sing distinctly, catchy music in which the show abounds.

The real surprises of the evening were Louise Meyers and Hattie Knoblet, who as two serving girls showed real, rare comedy in their songs. Miss Meyers received six encores for her clever "Lady from Germany" song.

Yes, Gaby is there with the spangles, but she has brought along a high-class company, and a clever, unusual musical comedy, and a whole big evening's entertainment.

Why Honest Witnesses Often Can't Tell the Truth.

Psychology discovers that mistakes in identity which furnish so many perplexing tangles in the courts are due to slippery memories and to the fact that we never really see as much as we imagine we do.

Hall Caine's Greatest Story

THE NARRATIVE OF MARY O'NEILL FOURTH PART I FALL IN LOVE

Copyright, 1912, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright in Great Britain. Copyright, 1913, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

"Good heavens! What an iniquity! In England, too! But never mind! There are other countries where this relic of the barbaric ages doesn't exist. Well go there. We must get a divorce somehow."

My time had come. I could keep back the truth no longer.

"But, Martin," I said, "divorce is impossible for me—quite impossible."

EYES WERE FLAMING

And then I told him I had been to see the Bishop also, and he had said what I had known before, though in the pain of my temptation I had forgotten it, that the Catholic church did not countenance divorce under any circumstances, because God made marriages, and therefore no man could dissolve them.

Martin listened intently, and in his eagerness to catch every word he raised himself on a kneeling position by my side, so that he was looking into my face.

"But Mary, my dear Mary," he said, "you don't mean to say you will allow such considerations to influence you?"

"I am a Catholic—what else can I do?" I said.

"But think—my dear, dear girl, think how unreasonable, how unjust, how preposterous it all is in a case like yours? God made your marriage? Yours? God quarrived you to that notorious profligate? Can you believe it?"

His eyes were flaming. I dared not look at them.

"Then think again. They say there's no divorce in the Catholic Church, do they? But what are they talking about? Morality speaking—you are a divorced woman already. Anybody with an ounce of brains can see that. When you were married to that man he made a contract with you, and he has broken the terms of it, hasn't he? Then where's the contract now? It doesn't any longer exist. Your husband is no husband."

"But isn't marriage different?" I asked.

And then I tried to tell him what the Bishop had said of the contract of marriage being unlike any other contract because God Himself had become a party to it.

"What!" he cried. "God become a party to a marriage like yours? My dear girl, only think! Think of what your marriage has been—lies, deceit and vanity and self-seeking that conceived it, the compulsion that was put upon you to carry it through, and then the shame and the suffering and the wickedness and the sin of it! Was God a party to the making of a marriage like that?"

In his agitation he rose, walked two or three paces in front and came back to me.

"Then think what it means if your marriage may not be dissolved. It means that you must, so on living with this man whose life is a degrading. Year in, year out, as long as your life lasts you must let him humiliate and corrupt you with his company, his companions and his example, until you are dragged down, down, down to the filth he lives in himself, and your very soul is contaminated. Is that what the Church asks of you?"

I answered no, and tried to tell him what the bishop had told me about separation, but he interrupted me with a shout.

"Separation? Did he say that? If the church has no right to divorce you, what right has it to separate you? . . . Oh, I see what it will say—hope of reconciliation. But if you were separated from your husband would you ever go back to him? Never in this world. Then what would your separation be? Only divorce under another name."

I was utterly shaken. Perhaps I wanted to believe what Martin was saying; perhaps I did not know enough to answer him, but I could not help it if I thought Martin's clear mind was making dust and ashes of everything that Father Dan and the bishop had said to me.

"But what can I do?" I asked.

FACE QUIVERED.

I thought his face quivered at that question. He got up again and stood before me for a moment without speaking. Then he said, with an obvious effort:

"If your church will not allow you to divorce your husband, and if you and I cannot marry without that then——"

"Yes?"

"I didn't mean to propose it . . . God knows I didn't, but when a woman . . . when a woman has been forced into a loveless marriage, and it is crushing the very life out of her, and the iron law of her church will not permit her to escape from it, what crime does she commit if she——"

"Well?" I asked, though I saw what he was going to say.

"Mary," he said, breathing hard and fast, "you must come to me."

I made a sudden cry, though I tried not to.

"Oh, I know," he said. "It's not what we could wish. But we'll be married then—that's the face to put. Why shouldn't we? I shall anyway. And if your father and the bishop don't like it—well, they'll have to do something. All the conventional canting hypocrisies! Every man who has bought his wife, and every woman who has sold herself into concubinage—there are thousands and thousands of them all the world over, and they'll try . . . Perhaps they'll try . . . but let them try. If they want to trample the life out of you they'll have to walk over me first—yes, by God, they will!"

"But Martin——"

"Well?"

"Do you mean that I . . . I am to . . . to . . . to live with you without marriage?"

"It's the only thing possible, isn't it?" he said. And then he tried to show me that love was everything, and if people loved each other nothing else mattered—religious ceremonies were nothing, the morality of society was nothing, the world and its back-biting was nothing.

The great moment had come for me and I thought I was torn between love and pity, I had to face it.

"Martin, I . . . I can't do it," I said.

He looked steadfastly into my face for a moment, but I dare not look back, for I knew he was suffering.

"You think it would be wrong?" he said.

"Yes."

"A sin?"

I tried to say "Yes" again, but my reply died in my throat.

NO MORE TO SAY.

There was another moment of silence and then, in a faltering voice that nearly broke me down, he said:

"In that case there is nothing more to say . . . There isn't, is there?"

I made an effort to speak, but my voice would not come.

"I thought . . . as there was no other way of escape from this terrible marriage . . . but if you think——"

He stopped, and then coming closer he said:

"I suppose you know what this means for you, Mary—that after all the degradation you have gone through you are shutting the door to a worthier, purer life, and that——"

I could bear no more. My heart was yearning for him, yet I was afraid to speak.

"But would it be a purer life, Martin, if it began in sin? No, no, I wouldn't, it couldn't. Oh, you can't think how hard it is to deny myself the happiness you offer me. It is harder than all the miseries my husband has inflicted upon me. But it wouldn't be happiness, because our sin would stand between us. That would always be there. Martin—every day, every night, as long as ever we lived. . . . We should say anything to each other hour by hour. I'm sure we should not. I should be unhappy myself and I should make you unhappy. Oh, I daren't! I daren't! Don't ask me, I beg—I beseech you."

I burst into tears after this, and there was a long silence between us. But Martin touched my arm and said with a gentleness that nearly broke my heart:

"Don't cry, Mary. I give in. I find I have no will but yours, dear. If you can bear the present condition of things, I ought to be able to. Let us go back to the house."

He raised me to my feet and we turned our faces homeward.

All the brightness of the day had gone for both of us by this time. The tide was now far out. Its moaning was only a distant murmur. The shore was a stretch of jagged black rocks covered with seaweed.

How I Darkened My Gray Hair

Lady Gives Simple Home Recipe That She Used to Darken Her Gray Hair.

For years I tried to restore my gray hair to its natural color with the prepared dyes and stains, but none of them gave satisfaction and they were all expensive. I finally ran onto a simple recipe which I mixed at home that gives wonderful results. I gave the recipe, which is as follows, to a number of my friends, and they are all delighted with it. To 1 oz. of water add a small box of Barbo Compound, 1 oz. of bay rum and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Use every other day until the hair becomes the required shade, then every two weeks. It will not only darken the gray hair, but removes dandruff and scalp humors, and acts as a tonic to the hair. It is not sticky or greasy, does not rub off and does not color the scalp. You can prepare it at home at very little expense. —Adv.

QUINCY MAYOR OUSTS BATES, NEW ASSESSOR

Gustave B. Bates, appointed chairman of assessors a month ago by Mayor John L. Miller, the new executive of Quincy, was dismissed by letter today by the Mayor, who says that Bates accused him openly at the State House of having been "hired" in the Quincy grade crossing matter.

The removal letter which Bates received read:

"At a hearing given at the State House on February 19, before the joint committee of the Legislature, on abolition of grade crossings at Saville street in Quincy, and Water street at Quincy Adams, by the so-called depression plan, you made the statement that an invisible committee, consisting of Faxon, King and Whitman, had fixed the special commissioners on those grade crossings. Then, after a pause, you added: 'and they have fixed our Mayor, too.'

"Now, sir, I have never had such language used about me and I certainly not and it now, as I shall guard my honor at all hazards, especially when such statements are absolutely without foundation.

"These statements were heard plainly and distinctly by Walter S. Pinkham, E. C. Sargent, Henry M. Faxon and many others, so it is evident you have lost faith in your Mayor and superior officer, and such statements as those and others you have made in your letters to the public press are harmful to the morale of City Hall. Therefore I feel I have but one honorable course left, to remove you."

Just One Application and Ugly Hairs Vanish

(Modes of Today)

Here is a simple treatment for removing ugly hairs. It is painless, requires little time and can be used in the privacy of your home: Get some powdered delatone and with water mix enough paste to cover the objectionable hairs. Apply for two or three minutes, then rub off, wash the skin, and it will be left soft, clear and hairless. This method is inexpensive and entirely harmless, but be sure to get delatone or the result may be disappointing.

POLICEMEN NOW AWAITING SALARY CUT

Will Police Commissioner O'Meara defy Mayor Curley to cut the salaries of the police which were raised by Mayor Fitzgerald?

This question is being asked today by 1,400 patrolmen and over 100 officials. Commissioner O'Meara is the only department head in the city who can refuse to allow the wholesale slashing in the city payroll by the Mayor.

The Commissioner said that he did not ask for the increases in his department, but they were placed there by Mayor Fitzgerald. He did not object to the increases. Today Mayor Curley sent for Commissioner O'Meara and told him that the salaries were too high and that they must be reduced.

NIELSEN AND MURATORE IN OPERA 'ROMEO'

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Gounod's "Romeo and Juliette," which was sung at the opera last night, was a novelty to most of the audience, although there are plenty of older opera goers who remembered that it was one one of the most popular works in the repertory.

The revival of "Romeo and Juliette" reminds us that the standard repertory contains nearer a hundred operas than the twenty-five that are sung during each opera season, and that every unworthy novelty that we hear is not only a offence in itself, but it is occupying space that might be devoted to "The Marriage of Figaro," "The Magic Flute," "The Masked Ball," "Favorita," "Sonnambula," "The Wagnerian Ring" and numerous other works that we do not hear.

How much better it is to hear the music of the genius who created "Faust" in another work, not so great, perhaps, but expressive of the enormous talents of one of the greatest composers who ever lived, than some such tiffe as "Monna Vanna," whose chief claim to attention is that it is an operation of a good play.

"Romeo and Juliette" was composed in 1867 to a libretto by Barbier and Carre based upon a loose arrangement of Shakespeare's immortal tragedy. Its success was immense and it has never lost its place in the repertory of French and Italian theatres.

Last year it was revived at the Metropolitan with Geraldine Farrar in the title role. The New York critics could not provide a good French tenor and Miss Farrar's Juliette was severely criticized.

EXCELLENT PERFORMANCE.

The scenery used last evening was borrowed from the Metropolitan opera and, of course, while gorgeous enough, was not in the distinctive style of Urban.

The music of this opera is dainty and melodious from beginning to end; it contains numerous beautiful melodies that are worthy of the composer of "Faust," but it is not so rich in fine tunes as that marvelous work. The inventive genius of Gounod was not so fresh and young when "Romeo and Juliette" was written as it the halcyon days of "Faust."

All in all, last night's performance was excellent. It was a premiere and revival of the cast were singing the music for the first time, so it was not surprising that there was some singing out of tune. Mr. Strony, who conducted, got an excellent general effect, and will undoubtedly polish up the details later.

Muratore, the tenor, is in a peculiar transitional period between the conventional French style of singing and the open Italian method. Thus in the garden scene and in the last act he followed the traditions and produced a thin covered tone with that nasal inflection which the French think so artistic and everybody else so detestable. In other scenes he opens up his truly extraordinary voice and releases magnificent tones, which electrified his audience. It is impossible to sing in both styles and do each justice and Muratore's falsetto was decidedly wobbly. Dramatically, he is nearly an ideal Romeo.

NIELSEN IS JULIETTE.

Per Juliette we had Alice Nielsen. Never did she look more dainty, demure, coquettish, bewitching and girlish, but she was singing the part for the first time and was not entirely steady in the earlier scenes. Her nervousness caused her to force her tones and she sometimes forced them off the pitch.

Vanni Marcoux, as the Friar Lawrence, dignified and magnified this not too important part, and sang impressively. Henri Danges as Mercutio, was impossible. Jenks Morse sang the page's song, perhaps the best melodic gem of the opera, with assurance, spirit and success. Rienzkaja as Gertrude, Wronski, Daru and Grand in minor roles were satisfactory.

I tried other medicines but got no relief. After taking one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use for six months. THE BROTHER COUNTS

CAST OF CHARACTERS.

COUNT MARRAT, a German Nobleman.
FREDERICK, his son and heir.
CHARLES, Frederick's younger brother.
ADOLPH VILLIER, an unprincipled gambler.
FLORENCE VILLIER, his sister.

CHAPTER I.

The young Count Charles Marrat was at the University of Heidelberg, when he received a message that his father was dying at the ancient family estate in Alsace.

His brother, Frederick, sent the message—Frederick who had been the real, the vital head of the family ever since Charles could remember, for the aged father had been ailing long.

It was the first thing that had ever brought home the gravity of life to the boy. He had led the merry life of the student, with hardly a thought of old Durenberg, where he had been reared. He had regarded the estate as belonging to Frederick—save for his own generous income—and he thought of a gay life in the capitals rather than of a return home.

The death of his father changed all that. He was too late to see the venerable Count alive, although he boarded a midnight train and made all haste homeward. Count Marrat was dead. It was Frederick who met him at the door with the crushing welcome.

The boy lingered at Durenberg through ten ghostly weeks. The effect of the tragedy that had suddenly brought understanding to him wore off in a measure. Durenberg was beautiful; it was even grand — but it was a little tiresome. He missed his companions at college, but he was not so eager to go back to college as he was to go out into the big world and see what it was like. At last he told his brother.

"I don't know why you shouldn't go—if you take some one with you that I know and can trust," said Frederick. "You know you're all I've got left, boy, and I don't want anything to happen to you. Take Bernheim."

"Gladly," said Charles. Bernheim was the aged servant who had been in the family since the boyhood of the late Count Marrat. He trembled with pleasure and appreciation of the trust when Frederick told him of it. He and Charles set out for Berlin.

CHAPTER II.

There was on the train a peculiar couple whom Charles met. One of them was a man of middle age, tall, stately, refined of manner, penetrating of look—almost too penerating. His name was Adolph Villier. He met Count Charles on a station platform, where the train was stopping for a few minutes. He invited him into his compartment and there—there Count Charles faced the first overwhelming wonder and joy of his life, as, at his father's death he had faced the first great sorrow. He met Miss Florence Villier, the sister of his new-found friend.

She was not more than twenty, and to say that she was exquisite would have been as much a platitude as to say a rose was sweet.

"You must be sure and come to see us in Berlin, Count," called Villier as he left the train.

"I will be sure," said Count Charles.

"Will I?" he added to himself. "Will I? Oh! what a woman!" Miss Villier waved a gracious adieu to him with her handkerchief.

His took the addressed card that Villier had given to him out of his waistcoat pocket and put it in his card case and locked the case as if he were treasuring some priceless gem.

CHAPTER III.

He was surprised at the magnificence of the Villier establishment. It was not extensive; it was not even in a very exclusive part of the city. But it was furnished in wonderful luxury—perhaps a little too much luxury for the refined taste. But to see Florence again, to go riding with her in the park and along the boulevards, to chat confidentially and with growing familiarity at the little stopping places—oh, it was life. Was it not, was something more? Count Charles was blissful. In other words he was a young man in love.

"Isn't it splendid, Bernheim?" he cried to the old man servant as he was undressing one night. Isn't this twice as good as dear old Durenberg?"

Bernheim shook his head. "I suppose it is, sir, I suppose it is, but Durenberg——"

"Ha!" laughed Charles. "You love the old things all the time, Bernheim. You don't appreciate the new."

"If I could say so, sir, there is something I do not quite like about this place. I hops I do not offend."

"Ridiculous."

"Yes, sir, you pardon, sir."

Count Charles and Mr. and Mrs. Villier were at dinner together that night when the elder man suggested suddenly:

"Wouldn't you like to join in a little game of cards? Some friends coming tonight."

"Well—I'm a pretty poor hand, but——"

"Oh, Florence will protect you. Florence stands behind my chair and tells the other people what I have in my hand by screeching," laughed Villier.

CHAPTER IV.

Florence did not stand behind Villier's chair when the card game was on. She was there. She spoke now and then to Count Charles, but she avoided her brother carefully. In fact her brother played for but a few minutes. He gave his seat to a beautiful woman in a red spangled gown. There were several women in the game, which was held in an upper part of the house—a secluded part—that Charles had never known was there.

Charles began to lose. His money flashed so rapidly away that even he, who had been used to spending large sums lightly, was astonished. But the party broke up cheerily enough while he still had plenty and he went to bed happy.

The next morning he rode in the park with Florence, and he asked her to marry him.

She shivered a little as he blurted out the question in the awkward way of a man whom love strikes deeply. He caught her in his arms and kissed her. Her lips met his ardently, rapturously, but they rode home in silence. She rushed into the house and up to her brother's room.

"You can't do it any longer; you CAN'T!" she cried. "He's good and kind and honorable—and YOU are not—and I love him!"

But Count Charles Marrat was at the gaming table again that night.

He lost more swiftly now. There were more players. If he had known anything of life he would have known that he was in one of the most frequented gambling houses of Berlin—and one of the worst. But he could not think that a house in which Florence lived could hold anything of evil under its roof.

When he had lost all the money he had with him he asked Villier for a loan.

"Why, surely—if you will just sign your name to a little note—only a matter of form," said Villier.

Count Charles reeled from the table suddenly. Florence had been absent that evening. He had lost every penny in his possession and had, he knew, involved his inheritance. He sent this telegram to his brother:

"I am ruined, through nobody's fault but my own. For a gentleman there is no choice. I must pay the full penalty. Good-bye."

CHAPTER V.

A year after the fatal message—a year after the body of Count Charles Marrat had been found under the bridge from which he leaped to death after his losses at Villier's table—Count Frederick, his brother, journeyed to Berlin. Durenberg had become gloomy. His health was weakening and his physician had ordered a complete change.

He went to the estate of his friend, the Count Kalenin, outside Berlin. There was another guest in the house —Miss Florence Villier. She was a friend of the Countess. They told Count Frederick frankly that she had fled from a brother in Berlin, who was a gambler and who had used her as a tool in his grim trade.

Count Frederick Marrat was often with Miss Villier during his pleasant weeks at the Castle of Kalenin. But he was make his little health pilgrimage under an assumed name and she knew him as plain Rudolf Hepstein.

In the spacious grounds surrounding the castle they rode together one day. They stopped their horses beside a little brook and dismounted. They shunned the rustic seat and sat by the brookside on the lush grass. Count Frederick Marrat told Florence Villier that he loved her. He begged her to be his wife—to light on with her beauty the gloom of Durenberg.

"Gloom?" she questioned, in smiling parley against his ardent appeal. To change the subject is a woman's right—and art.

"Since my little brother's death it has been gloom," he said. "My brother, Charles, killed himself."

"Your brother—Charles—is your name"——

She did not finish the question.

"I am using an assumed name," he said. "Of course, to my friends it is not think that a house in which Florence lived could hold anything of evil under its roof.

When he had lost all the money he had with him he asked Villier for a loan.

"Why, surely—if you will just sign your name to a little note—only a matter of form," said Villier.

Count Charles reeled from the table suddenly. Florence had been absent that evening. He had lost every penny in his possession and had, he knew, involved his inheritance. He sent this telegram to his brother:

They shunned the rustic seat and sat by the brookside on the lush grass. Count Frederick Marrat told Florence Villier that he loved her. He begged her to be his wife—to light on with her beauty the gloom of Durenberg.

"Gloom?" she questioned, in smiling parley against his ardent appeal. To change the subject is a woman's right—and art.

"Since my little brother's death it has been gloom," he said. "My brother, Charles, killed himself."

"Your brother—Charles—is your name"——

She did not finish the question.

"I am using an assumed name," he said. "Of course, to my friends it is not known. I am not trying to hide from the police. But I am the Count Frederick Marrat of Durenberg, and I ask you to be my wife, and——"

She fled from his side like a stricken deer. She did not stop to catch her horse's bridle. She fled into the house—through it—over toward the river. She was on the bridge above the rushing waters, when he caught her in his strong arms.

"And you would do THAT," he cried, "because I ask you to be my wife?"

She, because your brother asked me to be his wife," she sobbed.

She told her story—his brother's story—but she told it with his arm about her and her head upon his breast.

"The past is dead," he said.

The crying question, "On which side should one butter crackers?" solved through these columns is an appealing letter from "Gertrude S.," who confessed herself sorely puzzled in the matter, was drawn an answer. "Each Day" writes:

So I think they should be buttered on the smooth, upper side, because crackers naturally lie on the plate that way, also look much better so. And as Gertrude says, the waste should be something, for it is delicate work to butter well-toasted crackers."

WALTER CAMP'S COLUMN

Turners Taught Germany the Value of Athletics, and the British and American Schoolboys Have Done Likewise.

Just a word about the Turners, one of the most remarkable organizations in Germany, a wonderfully comprehensive institution.

STRENUOUS WORKOUTS ON DIAMOND COME BACK ON BRAVES' CAMP SQUAD

BRAVES SUFFER WITH SORENESS AFTER HOT WORK

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

MACON, Ga., March 5.—The Boston ball players were yelling for help today when they went on the field for the third day's practice. Soreness of arms, legs and bodies was in full swing and the moans of the athletes were pitiful to hear.

The third day's practice is always the worst day of Spring training. Tomorrow the soreness will begin to wear off and in a day or two will entirely disappear.

With Johnny Evers on hand and in uniform the infield is beginning to shape itself. The $50,000 star has developed into the bravest organization just as if he had always been a member of the team and just as if he never had been the manager of one of the greatest teams in baseball.

Evers' promises to start in just like a recruit and hold himself strictly subject to the orders of his manager just like a soldier in the ranks are being fulfilled.

EVERS BROUGHT FAMILY ALONG.

Stallings will have no trouble with his new star. Evers will prove a hard and earnest worker for the good of his club. Mrs. Evers and the two little children came along with the bread-winner and today they will be taken to Stallings' plantation at Haddock, Ga., sixteen miles north of Macon, to remain there while Evers is training here with the team.

Big Schmidt, the first baseman, is expected today. Pending his arrival Joe Schultz has been filling in at first base in the practice. The three Cuban players, two pitchers and a third baseman, have arrived but their trunks have not come, and as a result only one of them, Villazon, one of the pitchers, has been seen in practice.

Signor Segrera, the correspondent of La Prensa, the Havana newspaper very kindly furnished the correspondents of the Boston newspapers with a lot of "dope" on the Cuban players and it appears that they are pretty good men as far as figures go, but you never can judge a player's ability by his fielding average.

HOW THE PLAYERS LINE UP.

As we understand it down here there has been considerable difficulty in getting dispatches from the South to New York and Boston, owing to severe storm early in the week. For some of this writers' messages have been lost in the shuffle it may be well to give a list of the Boston players who are now here at Macon.

They are: Pitchers—Hess, Rudolph James, Hogg, Strand, Beck, Cochran, Meikle, Hersche, Crutchers Luque and Villazon; catchers—Cowdy, Pyler, Kenefick, Mitchell, infielders—Evers, Schultz, Deal, Martin, Gonzales, Marseville, outfielders—Connolly, Mann, Griffith, Gilbert.

There are three men at Hot Springs —Perdue, Sweeny and Whaling. Big Schmidt and Pitcher Duchesnie are on their way. Catcher Dick Lewis and Infielder Dugey are expected in a day or two, and Pitcher George Davis will report in June.

The uproaring hit of the training camp is "Scotty" Murphy, Trainer Dooley's assistant.

"Scotty" has a "burr" in his voice as thick as a Bay of Fundy fog, and it is only after a violent effort that words are pried from his mouth.

EASY GOING FOR A WAITER.

It is simply a scream to listen to him talk. He keeps the players, with whom he is a prime favorite, in roars of laughter all the time. Scotty appears to be innocence personified, but he is, nevertheless, a "wise guy," and the players find it hard work to put anything over on him.

Thus far the practice has been of the simplest kind. Stallings is making his men take things slowly. The team is to be here for a month and there is no need of haste.

In a day or two, when the soreness has all worn off, say next Monday, the players will be allowed to speed up.

There is sure to be a grand contest for third base honors with Deal, Martin, Pick, Gonzales, the Cubans and perhaps Dubuc, fighting for the place, with Sweeny yet to be heard from.

As to what Sweeney will do, Manager Stallings is non-committal. He is quite likely he has not as yet made up his mind where to play Captain Bill.

Only one of the three Cuban players talks English. Stallings has conveyed a hint to the other two that it would be well for them to learn our language as quickly as possible if they expect to stick around with the team.

Last year we had a Cuban catcher, Gonsales, on the Spring training trip. He made no effort to learn English and Stallings had to let him go, as he couldn't talk with him.

Three Special Bouts for Show at Salem

B. A. Lavelle, New England middleweight champion, and Charlie Johnston of East Boston have been matched to meet in a special bout at the North Shore A. A. amateur boxing tournament next Monday night. They met a few weeks ago at the University Club, Cambridge, and Lavelle was awarded the verdict. This makes three special bouts in all, and it appears as though the North Shore Club will serve up a show which should interest every sport follower in Essex county.

Chicopees After Baseball Games

The Chicopees of Roxbury have organized a fast baseball team and are ready to meet any twelve-thirteen-year-old team in Massachusetts. FEDS AFTER COLLINS

CARRIGAN'S BAND HELD UP BY RAIN

RICH OFFER FOR STAR

CAMP SCENES AT THE RED SOX PARK

Fred Coombs warming up; "Doc" Green massaging Heinie Wagner's sore shoulder, and Chief Carlow, the Red Sox Indian pitcher.

Bradley, Former Nap Player, Joins Outlaw Ranks and Tries to Raid Training Camps.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 5.—Ray Collins is still a member of the Boston Red Sox. Rather, it should be stated that the renowned southpaw is still a member of the Boston Red Sox squad.

Everything on the horizon indicates that Collins was shipped one very voluptuous offer by Bill Bradley to form a staggering trio kicker of the orig nal Naps of Cleveland.

Bradley calmly sneaked into our fair village, kept under cover and then a week he left after holding seven four-number conferences with Collins.

Bradley blew pow-wowed with Yean Grugg, Bert Whaling, Bill Sweeney and most every other athlete, who is at all important and spouted Federal league doctrine to the Ty Cobb type of the ace.

Bradley has had enough of Joe Kelley and Canada and has allied himself with the Federal League.

BRADLEY HAS FED. BENTH.

He has all but signed to manage the Brooklyn club in the Gilmore organization, but at present is doing the Southern training camps for the interests of the Federal league. He was in Hot Springs for a day and a half, told a lot of the hired hands of Lanuin, Cooney Somers and Ebbets that the Feds were going to make baseball cost. That it was in the baseball field for all time and that he could show the magnates where they could collect a fixed salaries. Also collect what and inflicted contracts called for.

So far as known Bradley didn't succeed in swiping anybody. But he found a lot of ready listeners and likewise encountered a lot of enthusiastic boosters.

The pretty well understood in high circles that Bradley left some mighty fat figures for Collins, Gregg, et al, to study over, stating upon making his departure that he would be back along about Saturday or Sunday and that if any of the youths he was chasing wanted to sign with the new league he would be glad to oblige with autographs and get the merry mazuma wired into Hot Springs on the instant.

HAVE HELD UP WORK.

The correspondents are pasticuing under the same roof with Collins and they are the pest of the Boston boys. We buzz with them nearly and our questions are not answered, but all replies are of the evasive variety and we cannot positively learn from their sweet anuthaw or whitherer Manager Mather thinks Sweet Southaw signed his Red Sox contract, or Mr. Lannin before the team came South, or whether he squeezed the figures in the document.

He it as it may, Carrigan seems to think that Collins is his property and is going to stick with the team. Collins also seems to figure himself a one of Lannin's chattels.

There was nothing doing in the way of work for the Red Sox yesterday for the most excellent reason that it drizzled all the preceding night and kept drizzling all morning.

BAN JOHNSON WELCOMES WAR WITH FEDERALS

CHICAGO, March 5.—President Ban Johnson of the American League is welcoming war with the Federal League. While he does not say so, in that many words, he did state before departing for New York to-night, the returning world's tourists, that he did not take the Federal League seriously, and does not intend to answer the threat made by President Gilmore of the Feds.

"We are not worrying about the Federal League," said Mr. Johnson "It is to be hoped and angered in early in the game, what will become of him later on? And the people don't take him seriously. The outlaw has not taken many of our players. If President Somers of Cleveland has negotiated with Pitcher Bagby it was because he had a legal right to do so. We will not threaten the legality of the reserve clause at present, but the Federals are not causing us any loss of sleep."

MILAN GETS IN LINE

"FEDS" SOUGHT HIM

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 5.—Clyde Milan, leading baserunner of the big leagues has just signed a one-year contract with the Washington American League club, receiving a substantial increase. Milan was sought by the Federal League and his delay in signing gave rise to the belief that he would jump.

Speaker Still Unsigned, Says Runyon Wireless

Wireless to Boston American

PABLE ISLAND, S. S. Louisiana, March 5.—All well on board. We will dock Friday. White Sox party will put up at Hotel Fillmore and Giants at Imperial. Players in the party who have not signed contracts for the coming season are: This Speaker, Red Sox outfielder; Mike Doolan, Phillies' shortstop; Lee Magee, Cardinals' second baseman; Al Leverenz, Braves' pitcher, and Sam Crawford, Detroit's outfielder.

Doolan is sore at Phillies' management probably over the eternal salary question. A big entertainment was given last night with a bunch of players filling out part of the program.—DAMON RUNYON.

BOWLING FACTS AND COMMENT

IF THE FEDERAL TEAM KEEPS UP ITS present pace it will be a hard matter for any team in the league to overtake it. Even if the Federals lose a game or two they have more than ten points to spare over the second place team, and it will take a lot of bowling to beat that aggregation.

Many of the bowlers in the league have been in a slump for the past few weeks, but it is to be hoped that they will soon get out of it, as it is going to be a hard matter for any team to overtake the Federals.

HALPIN TO TRY FOR NEW MARKS AT TWO MEETS

Tom Halpin the record-breaking B. A. A. captain, has not, as has been reported, retired until the outdoor season starts, as he is planning to compete in two meets next week.

The middle-distance wonder will run in the quarter and half-mile events at the meet of the Emmet Guards in Worcester next Monday night, and will start in the three-quarter-mile run at the annual games of the Bronx Church House Athletic Association in New York Tuesday.

Halpin will probably try to hang up a new mark for the indoor quarter at Worcester, although the present record was set by him making last season. He has never yet run the three-quarter-mile distance and the present mark will undoubtedly be changed after he gets through with it in New York.

Seeking a Husband

By CONSTANCE CLARKE

It seems a year since last night, and in the bustle of saying goodby to the crowd I didn't see Dick alone a single minute. And when I got up to the den I was too excited to think, so I got right into bed and closed my eyes and I thought I'd never go to sleep. People in love don't, as a rule, but I guess I must have been very tired because I fell asleep almost as soon as my head touched the pillow. And I dreamed about him. I can't remember much beside a whirl of wind; anyway, we seemed to be sailing away on two clouds and every time Dick came anywhere near me I called out:

"Please don't come any nearer, Dick," but he didn't pay any attention; he just tried to bump his cloud into mine and I was sure we'd both be killed. And then suddenly there was a cloud with a big headlight coming straight for us, and I wasn't a bit afraid and tried to sail my cloud right into it and it came nearer and nearer, and it was so bright and it kept getting brighter and brighter, and suddenly I woke up and found it was the sun shining through the pink cretonne curtains right onto my pillow. Such a funny dream, I thought, as I yawned and smiled at myself in the mirror on my dressing table. And then up came Mary with a tray and a big box.

"Oh, Mary," I said, "you shouldn't spoil me like this!"

But Mary laughed, and I forgot all about my breakfast tray when I held the big box in my arms.

"American Beauties," I sighed softly as I lifted them out and held them against my hot cheeks. And then I reached for the tiny white envelope and promptly forgot everything else in the world.

"A kiss upon each petal—Dick," were the only words written on the card. But Dick had no business to send me all those kisses, and so perhaps I oughtn't to keep the roses, and then I laughed at myself. Oh, I was so happy, and I held the roses in one arm all tangled up in the lace of my night gown and balanced my coffee cup with the other, and just laughed and laughed. And every body in the world seemed to be laughing. The sun kept grinning and trying to poke his yellow fingers through the window pane, and mother was humming a soft little tune down stairs, and I was Peggy Dean, and yet I was quite a different Peggy, the Peggy I used to know never felt like this. And then I wondered what I would do when he came, and began to wonder if I weren't just a little bit too happy.

Could I be? And then I tumbled out of bed and looked at myself in the glass. I'm afraid I looked too radiant. I never knew any one to stay as happy as that, and yet it wasn't very much to wish for, just to be happy.

"Do you think I could be, mother?" I said breathlessly, rushing downstairs with my hair all tumbling into my eyes, and forgetting that she wouldn't know what I was talking about.

"Could he what, Peggy?"

"Too happy." I said, backing out of the room. Mother had such very keen eyes sometimes. Some one I know told me once that it was an easy matter to read right into my soul, and the things that she read weren't a bit nice, and she is so very wonderful and I wanted her to like me so very much that I have never quite forgotten about it.

"Did Dick send the flowers?" said mother, not looking up from her work.

"Yes," I assented, pausing in the doorway.

"And that's why you're happy," she went on. "Don't make the mistake of falling in love with love, little girl."

And then I went upstairs very thoughtfully and put my roses in water. What's the difference between falling in love with love and falling in love with a man? More problems, and I just can't stop being happy long enough to think today. Dick, am I in love with you, or am I in love with love? Anyway, I'm in love!

A Weather Forecast

Geordie and Mary had been wed many years, consequently were not much used to paying each other compliments. The other day, when returning together from the store, Geordie remarked, as he looked up skyward:

"Aa doot wor can to hev rain, lass."

"No," snapped Mary, "nowt o' the sort; it's fine eneuf."

"An divvent knaa as much about that," replied Geordie. "Aa's sure Aa felt a drop on ma ear just noo."

"Wey," was the answer, given with a grunt, "that says nowt, onyway, for yer lugs is that big that ayme rain might still be two or three miles off."

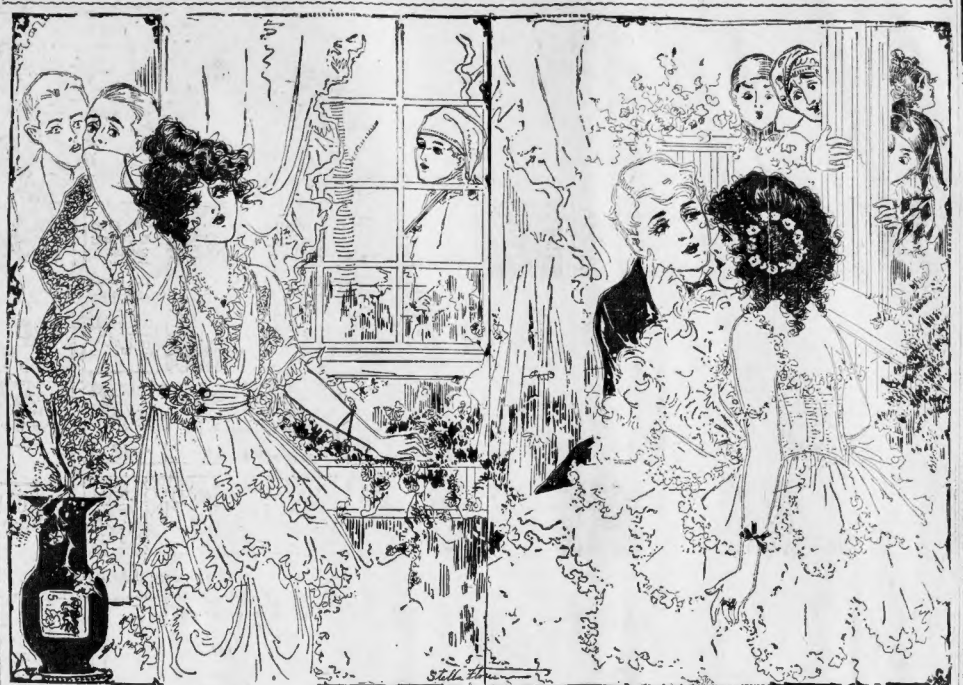
Bashful Bob

The Amusing Adventures of a Shy Young Man

It's a Long Lane That Has No Turn.

By STELLA FLORES

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service



THE visiting girl from the city was bored. Her friends watched her anxiously as she gazed out of the window, a little frown between her brows. Her eyes suddenly met those of a tall young stranger who was passing. "Oh, do tell me, who is he?" she exclaimed. "Why, that's bashful Bob," was the answer. It was Jimmy Drake who thought of the great idea. "We'll tell him our masquerade tonight is a stag party, and let you see how shy he is!" he enthused. "Oh, that would be too mean!" she protested in quick sympathy. But her objections were soon overruled by the others.

AND that was the way Bob was inveigled to the party. He was dressed as an old-fashioned beau, and the City Girl wore one of her grandmother's dresses. Every one watched to see his confusion as he met her. To be sure, he did blush. But the City Girl was quick to note his fine, clean face and his glorious manliness. And while they were all waiting eagerly to see the fun, she strolled off with Bob to the far end of the great hall. And there they staid for the rest of the evening, to the disgust of all the boys in town, who were dying for a chance to tango with her.

Their Married Life

Mrs. Thurston Returns Helen's Money, But Sends with It a Scathing Note

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

It was Helen's nature to nurse a grievance. Even a very slight grievance, if she dwelt long enough upon it, would take on alarming proportions.

And now she had brooded over Mrs. Thurston's insolent refusal to return the money she owed her, until it had become an obsession. She could think of nothing else.

It was not now merely the loss of the twenty-five dollars—it had gone far beyond that. Had she had it Helen would have given ten times that much for the satisfaction of making Mrs. Thurston return the money.

Even the mildest and gentlest of women, when thoroughly aroused, are capable of all the fellish ferocity. And Helen was now thoroughly aroused. She was consumed with a feverish desire for revenge.

What could she do that would hurt Mrs. Thurston most? She could write to her husband! Helen shrank from this thought—yet Mrs. Thurston would be callous to anything else. It was only through her husband that she COULD hurt her!

Why shouldn't she write him? A husband is responsible for his wife's debts. Lashed on by the increasing bitterness and intensity of her broodings, Helen finally wrote the note.

It was a relief to her boiling indignation just to write it, even though she knew it would never be sent. It is both safe and expedient to give vent to one's rankling resentment in letters—that are never posted.

"My dear Mr. Thurston—It may interest you to know that Mrs. Thurston borrowed twenty-five dollars from me almost two months ago, which she promised to return in two weeks. She has not only failed to return the money, but has refused to speak to me over the phone, and has insolently ignored my letter. I am so indignant at her attitude that I feel justified in writing to you. Very truly yours,

HELEN L. CURTIS."

This note not only relieved Helen's pent-up feelings, it also suggested a brilliant idea. She would send the note—but to MRS. Thurston, with the warning that unless the money was returned at once Mr. Thurston would receive a copy at a very early date.

Helen's thoughts capered gleefully around this idea. Mrs. Thurston would be as anxious and worried and unhappy as she WANTED her to be! And undoubtedly she would send the money, for she stood much in awe of her husband. It was to keep him from knowing that she had exceeded his very generous allowance that she had had to borrow.

Hele. made several drafts of a letter to Mrs. Thurston before she finally produced what she considered a masterpiece of brevity and effectiveness.

A "MASTERPIECE."

"My Dear Mrs. Thurston—Possibly you may care to glance over the enclosed note, a copy of which I intend to mail to your husband unless I receive the money you owe me by return mail.

As I have never in my life borrowed a cent from you or from any one else, I feel under no obligations to bear the burden of your extravagance. You prevailed upon my generosity to lend you this money to help you out of an embarrassing situation, and now that you insolently ignore this debt I feel that I am quite justified in writing to your husband. Very truly yours,

"HELEN L. CURTIS."

With a glow of satisfaction, Helen dispatched this letter, note enclosed, by special delivery.

All goody-goody precepts to the contrary, there is a certain satisfaction in "getting even" when you feel that you have been outrageously imposed upon. And for the rest of that day Helen basked complacently in the soothing appeasement of retaliation.

She spent many pleasant moments picturing Mrs. Thurston's chagrin and rage when she read the letter. Mrs. Thurston no doubt considered her weakly yielding and incapable of "fighting back," for she had, once criticised her for being entirely too abject towards Warren, claiming that unless she asserted herself more, any man would "lord it over her."

But Mrs. Thurston would learn that because a woman chooses to be pliastic in the hands of the man she loves, is no reason why she will not stand fiercely for her rights if she is imposed upon by another woman.

Yes, this would be a very salutary lesson for Mrs. Thurston, and one that she had brought upon herself by her breach of faith and her insolence.

It was that same evening, while they were at dinner, that the door bell rang and a messenger boy stalked in, taking a letter from out his cap.

"Here, Helen, it's for you." Warren tossed over the missive as he signed the receipt.

With a fork Helen ripped open the envelope, her heart beating triumphantly as a folded check fell out. So her ruse had been successful!

But as she read the letter her face slowly reddened.

"My Dear Mrs. Curtis:

"To prevent you from having any more hysterics over this matter, I hasten to send you your twenty-five dollars. Had I known that you were in such desperate need of this small sum, I would certainly have returned it before this. It is needless to say I regret that I ever borrowed it.

Your frantic efforts to get it back have been a most amusing revelation of your character. Very truly yours,

ELIZABETH B. THURSTON."

"What's the matter?" demanded Warren, as he saw her deepening flush.

"Nothing; only Mrs. Thurston returned that money."

"She did, eh! Well that's a darn sight more than I thought she'd do. What's wrong? You don't look over pleased."

"Oh, the note—the insolent note she sent with it!"

"Let's see," holding out his hand."

"No—no, dear, I'd rather not," flushing furiously.

"Nonsence, let me see it!"

Reluctantly Helen yielded the note.

"Huh, stirred up the old dame, didn't you?" as he read it. "But what do you care what she writes, as long as you get the money?

"Oh, I DO care." Helen was now tearing up the note with fierce, catching sobs. "I'll never—NEVER," passionately, "lend anybody another cent as long as I live!"

"Good! That's the stuff."

"To prevent me from being 'hysterical!'" bitterly, quoting the note. "An amusing revelation' of my character! And now she'll go around telling everybody about it. I can just HEAR her telling Mrs. Stevens that I lent her a few dollars and wouldn't let her rest until I got it back."

WARREN'S PHILOSOPHY

"What if she does? The main thing is she's PAID UP! Of course she's mad—mad as a hatter. Thought she was going to beat you out of it! You must have put the screws on pretty hard to bring her around."

"Yes, I did write her a strong letter, but I didn't say anything bad as hatter as she's said in this."

"Who cares a whoop what she says," imitated Warren. "You've got your money back. You've pulled off a whacking good stunt to make her come across. What more do you want?"

But even Warren's approval could not stop Helen's cheeks from burning, or take away the sting of those two cutting sentences in Mrs. Thurston's note.

Why should she be made to feel small and contemptible when she had been in the right all along? Because she had generously lent this money—this was her reward!

If she had been as mercenary as Mrs Thurston so scornfully implied she would never have given her the money. She would simply have said that she did not have it; Mrs. Thurston would have remained her friend and she would have been spared all this humiliation.

But because she had been generous, because she had tried to help a friend out of an embarassing situation, the result was that she had forfeited a friend and gained an enemy. She had received a note, the stinging insolence of which would rankle for months, and she had laid herself liable to be mercilessly talked about.

Every one to whom Mrs. Thurston would repeat a distorted, garbled version of this story would consider her unreasonably and selfish.

Helen could have shrieked aloud at the flagrant unfairness and injustice of it all.

Beatrice Fairfax Writes On

The Wherewithal; or, Love and Money

It Is Seldom That Either Remembers That It Will Cost More for Two.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE fluttering of the wings of the dear little god makes a soothing sound that lulls to sleep all disquieting suspicions of impracticability. One who feels the air stirred by his wings forgets the price of rent and baron, and if beefsteak obtrudes it is not with price mark attached, but enveloped in a sort of incense.

Neither remembers it will cost more for two, but each dreams how much more enjoyable every joy will be when shared by both.

If either, in a rare moment of sanity, asks a practical question, the other is amazed, indignant, angry, and then skeptical of the other's love.

Such, knowing this, carefully conceals every symptom of sanity from the other. It is never a display of wisdom that pleases the dear little god. The blind have always followed most closely at his heels.

When the awakening comes, which, in comman practice, means the waning of the honeymoon, each accuses the other of the very faults which a few weeks before pleased the most. He wants to know of her why she hasn't mastered the art that makes a cheap cut of meat tastes like porterhouse. She wants to know why he concealed from her the fact that his wages are not enough to keep more than one, and the dear little god hears these questions and spreads his wings for flight.

Because even those who love must eat and be sheltered, and the grocer, the butcher and the landlord make no discounts because of ignorance and inexperience. It is almost amusing that a man should write me a letter like the following:

"Kindly inform me if it is proper for a young lady to ask me if I have any money. I have kept company with her for six months and am very indignant that she should ask such a question of me. Kindly advise me on the subject. I have no money."

Proper! Is it proper for a girl to let herself fall in love and be drawn into marriage with a man who hasn't enough money to keep her in shoes? Is it proper to give the heart and receive in return an empty home?

Is it proper to shut one's eyes and drift to disaster on the rocks? Is it proper to commit suicide by starvation.

The girl has given you six months of her precious time; your attentions indicate that you want the rest of her life; and when she asks you if you have money your sense of propriety is outraged! My dear young man, the young woman is sane, and you are not. When you come back to your wits you will see that a girl who has the courage to ask a question like that of a man who has been monopolizing her time for six months is a girl much above the ordinary and will make some man a splendid wife.

Household Suggestions

After washing cut glass in the usual way in soap and water, rinse in water in which a little washing blue has been dissolved. After drying polish with tissue paper. This imparts a fine brilliance which quite repays one for the little extra trouble taken.

To keep the white of an egg from leaving the yolk and scattering about in the water, take a spoon and stir the water rapidly round for a few seconds, then drop the egg gently in the "hole" in the centre of the whirlpool formed by the rapid motion of the spoon. Boil up quickly for three or four minutes.

In cases of illness, when ice is not procurable for cooling the head of a feverish patient, cut a strip of cucumber peeled rather thick, and lay the inner part on the forehead. It has a deliciously cooling effect.

FORBES SEES CUT COMING IN TRAIN SERVICE

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

You may find your train service cut down shortly. The largest railroad system in the United States—and in the world—has started to reduce the number of its trains. And the Pennsylvania's example has been followed by the New Haven.

Unless conditions are speedily corrected, other roads are certain to follow suit.

* * *

What attitude do the public—what attitude do your readers—take toward the whole railroad problem?

* * *

Let there be no misconception on this simple point.

Railroads cannot be run forever at a loss. Any more than can any other people investors, against their will, to supply capital for unprofitable purposes.

The public must accept either the first hour and later in the morning. Americans had been lower in London, where the advance in New York yesterday had little effect. Foreigners thought it due to professional operations and as yet indicating any change in speculative conditions on this side. They were not even impressed by the easy way in which offerings by foreigners were absorbed in New York. Europeans, in fact, cannot understood the policy of the Wilson administration any more than they can comprehend American politics in general. They are pessimists as regards what the United States will have to do with Mexico eventually. In Germany, and perhaps elsewhere, the government of the country is credited more with being weak than altruism. The Mexican situation had no apparent effect upon American markets this morning. Reports as to proceedings by American "leisure class," termed the unemployed, caused a renewal of the discussion as to what trade conditions in this country really are like now, and what percentage of wage earners are out of work. Last week the surface stock markets seemed firm, although news, as a whole, was rather gloomy. Advices were supposed to indicate that liquidation has been drastic and that stocks are almost wholly in strong hands by those who can afford to carry them.

TRADING BECAME QUIET.

While the market was fairly active at the start business did not continue on that scale and when prices showed a decided tendency towards the end of an hour the volume of transactions grew much less. New York central earnings for January caused a renewal of discussion, as to how far the road would maintain the present dividend rate. In that month its gross declined nearly $1,000,000 or nearly twice the shrinkage reported for December. The comparison as to net was not unfavorable. It was only natural when a number of issues declined during the forenoon there was buying by some large interests, as actual told tale. By noon there were more stocks showing fractional than there were others which had advanced. Most of the changes were slight, but American Sugar was materially lower. During noontime General Motors was nearly four points higher and American Sugar off more than two. Chesapeake & Ohio had slumped more than five. One dispatch said the break was due principally to a statement in connection with the offering of notes that the company will have to pay large sums each year out of earnings for investment in property.

COPPER METAL LOWER.

Copper issues were quiet and it was cabled from London that producers were making more effort to sell metal. It was stated that they were offering electrolytic at the rate of 14¾ cents a pound, and would probably take less to get business. Recent sales are believed to have totalled only a few million pounds. It is claimed that upon sales to American consumers they obtained around 14¾ cents a pound. Most users in this country and abroad are disinclined to do much buying until the Copper Producers' Association has reported the amount of supply on hand at the end of February.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The London copper warrants market was dull, spot and warrant futures being unchanged at noon.

Owing to trade depression in Canada, the Dominion Steel Corporation has deferred the common dividend due on April 1.

Missouri Pacific has ordered eighty-three all-steel passenger cars. They will cost about $1,000,000, and will be made by the American Car & Foundry Company.

In the new contract with the Edison Company, for street lighting, Mayor Curley expects to save the city $1,250,000, if the agreement extends for ten years.

The Bank of England's minimum rate of discount remained unchanged at 3 per cent. today.

Suez Canal tolls were reduced to prepare for Panama Canal competition and 1912 receipts were 122,910,000 francs against 132,912,000 in the previous year.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

When the New York market opened the range was slightly lower than at the close yesterday, and the upturn of yesterday, said to be partly due to short covering and shift of position by important traders, as well as to some buying by outsiders, was not maintained. Prices had a narrow movement in most instances. While a few specialties showed strength and made good gains most railroads reflected poor reports as to recent earnings by carriers. That by Reading was an unfavorable factor in the list. Uncertainty prevailed in trading circles and fettered speculation. Neither bears nor bulls are willing to assume much risk in support of opinions. Few have any pronounced ones as to what is going to happen to the market next. In early trading Bethlehem Steel, Distillers Securities and Central Leather made gains, while Chesapeake & Ohio was weak among rails owing to the new financing which it is announced the road will attempt.

PRICES WERE IRREGULAR.

Prices were irregular during the first hour and later in the morning. Americans had been lower in London, where the advance in New York yesterday had little effect. Foreigners thought it due to professional operations and as yet indicating any change in speculative conditions on this side. They were not even impressed by the easy way in which offerings by foreigners were absorbed in New York. Europeans, in fact, cannot understood the policy of the Wilson administration any more than they can comprehend American politics in general. They are pessimists as regards what the United States will have to do with Mexico eventually. In Germany, and perhaps elsewhere, the government of the country is credited more with being weak than altruism. The Mexican situation had no apparent effect upon American markets this morning. Reports as to proceedings by American "leisure class," termed the unemployed, caused a renewal of the discussion as to what trade conditions in this country really are like now, and what percentage of wage earners are out of work. Last week the surface stock markets seemed firm, although news, as a whole, was rather gloomy. Advices were supposed to indicate that liquidation has been drastic and that stocks are almost wholly in strong hands by those who can afford to carry them.

TRADING BECAME QUIET.

While the market was fairly active at the start business did not continue on that scale and when prices showed a decided tendency towards the end of an hour the volume of transactions grew much less. New York central earnings for January caused a renewal of discussion, as to how far the road would maintain the present dividend rate. In that month its gross declined nearly $1,000,000 or nearly twice the shrinkage reported for December. The comparison as to net was not unfavorable. It was only natural when a number of issues declined during the forenoon there was buying by some large interests, as actual told tale. By noon there were more stocks showing fractional than there were others which had advanced. Most of the changes were slight, but American Sugar was materially lower. During noontime General Motors was nearly four points higher and American Sugar off more than two. Chesapeake & Ohio had slumped more than five. One dispatch said the break was due

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Most of the dealers in this city will be busily engaged today superintending the placing of their show cars in their respective booths in Mechanics building. Many of the shipments of show cars from the various factories were delayed by the serious storm which swept the West and Middle West in the last few days and those dealers who have not received their show cars are burning up the wires locating their shipments and getting them started again on their way to this city.

The work of arranging the railings that will divide each section and the erection of the framework for the decorations has been completed and Manager Chester I. Campbell expects to finish the work of decorating the walls today.

A large force of electricians are on hand, for the electric wiring will be a tremendous task. This year the outside of the building will be illuminated for the first time in the history of the show.

The telephone company has a large force of linemen at work putting up the massive switch board that every exhibitor will have a telephone connection at his particular booth.

Fred W. Kee, well known in the local motor industry, is now connected with the Federal tire branch in this city as traveling representative in Massachusetts.

The increasing adoption of utility cars for the use of salesmen and others who must cover a large territory of merchandise is the purchase of five White roadsters by the firm of Waitt & Bond of Boston. This company manufactures several well-known brands of cigars and it is the intention of the firm to have their salesmen cover their territories with these roadsters.

An unusual feature of this purchase is the fact that the company bought cars of a higher grade and higher price than are usually employed in this line of work, having had a previous experience with their former equipment of low-priced cars. Each of the new roadsters is built with a special trunk to contain samples of the different brands and sizes of cigars.

THE THREADS OF BONDAGE

Every day man "lets things slide," or "takes things easy," habit is weaving its invisible threads into an unbreakable net about him.

Mr. Bird's Criticism of the Administration's Mexican Policy Is Significant

When Charles Sumner Bird can no longer refrain from publicly criticising the government's attitude toward Mexico, it is significant.

Mr. Bird is an able and responsible business man. In addition to the natural responsibility of his character and business training, there is the responsibility of his leadership in a great party. As the Progressive candidate HE RECEIVED MORE VOTES THAN THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE. Such men do not go off half cocked nor do they lightly criticise their government in its foreign policy unless its error seems so clear and great as to leave no doubt in their minds that they ought to speak out.

The fact is significant also that Mr. Bird, the leader of the Massachusetts Progressives, has chosen to compare the faltering of the present administration with the vigor of Roosevelt's foreign policy.

As a Progressive, Mr. Bird is properly proud of the Americanism of his great Progressive national leader—Theodore Roosevelt. The laconic message which the National Government under Roosevelt sent to Morocco on learning that an American citizen named Perdicaris had been abducted and was in danger of his life at the hands of the bandit Raisuli, will become a classic in American diplomatic history.

Mr. Bird says:

> President Roosevelt did not explain to the American people, as President Wilson has lately in the case of Mexico—that Perdicaris was an American citizen who had assumed all risk of living abroad, and therefore was not entitled to the protection of our government. Admiral Chadwick, who with the South Atlantic squadron had been sent in haste to Morocco, reported that the Moroccan government was not acting in good faith. Immediately, by President Roosevelt's instruction, the following cablegram was sent:
>
> "We want either Perdicaris alive or Raisuli dead." Perdicaris was released.

Mr. Bird asked:

> Why all the bother about the murder of one Englishman. Of course, it was an outrage for which England will demand and obtain reparation, as she always does, but why does the Democratic administration place so much more value upon the life of one Englishman than upon the lives of scores of American citizens murdered in Mexico. A great London paper remarked a few days ago, "PRESIDENT WILSON IS MUCH MORE PATIENT AT THE DEATHS OF MANY AMERICANS THAN OF ONE ENGLISHMAN." It is difficult to understand the apparent indifference of our State Department to the horrible situation in Mexico during the past year, where murder and pillage have been everywhere.

Not only is the administration jeopardizing the safety and the interests of our citizens in Mexico, but we are proclaiming to the world that under the new dispensation it is quite safe to outrage American citizens abroad.

But this policy of watchful waiting in Mexico is affecting more than our citizens abroad. The government is in such straits through its mistaken policy that it is now proposing to sacrifice our rights and interests in the Panama Canal to appease Great Britain and to serve the great transcontinental railroads.

Again, the contrast with Roosevelt is painful. Under his aggressive leadership the government acquired the territory through which the Panama Canal flows, making it American soil, began the construction of the canal against the opposition of the railroads, and organized the mighty force which has achieved this greatest modern engineering feat, to stand as the perpetual monument of American brains and enterprise. Now it is proposed to throw away one of the great advantages of this canal by making American ships pay the same toll through the canal which any foreign ship must pay.

Democrats in Congress are asked to repudiate their party platform, and many of them are asked to reverse their own vote on this question. But if they yield to the power of the presidential patronage and to the railroads and break their party faith and stultify themselves, they need not hope that any of their constituents will heed their professions that they surrender an invaluable American right in order to gain the respect of the world, which the administration is throwing away by an insane policy in Mexico.

ITALIANS SWIMMING IN ICY WATER

This picture was taken in Milan. It will surprise many Americans who foolishly believe that the Italians are "men of a soft climate and soft bodies." (See editorial.)

If You Knew the Italians This Picture Would NOT Surprise You

For More Than Two Thousand Years the Italians Have Been Among the Hardiest Men of Any Race. And They Haven't Lost Their Power

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

We print on this page a picture of Italians swimming in icy water. The snow has been deep and the cold intense in Northern Italy. Here you see not one, but more than a dozen Italians that have dived from the snowbank and are swimming in the water.

This picture will cause Americans who know little about other countries and other people to lose some of their prejudices.

The Italians are hardy men, fighters, men with strong bodies. They are the descendants of the men that went with Cæsar over the Alps, of men that could fight equally well in the snows of the North or in the desert sands.

They have been great in body and brain for twenty centuries, AND THEY ARE GREAT AS EVER TODAY.

That is why we fight the stupid prejudice against them and why we hope for constantly increasing immigration from the land that breeds such men as you see in this photograph.

When you look at this picture, remember that, while the Italians have plenty of that ordinary courage which defies cold and physical suffering, that is not the great Italian courage.

The Italians have been heroes of the MIND as well as heroes of the body—from the earliest days of authentic history.

The Italian is as brave in thought as in deed—and that is why the Italian thought for centuries has led in the world's thinking.

These young men whom you see laughing and sporting in the icy water, walking barefoot in the snow—as old Socrates the Greek walked barefoot on the snowy battlefield—represent the PHYSICAL hardiness of the Italian—Roman—race.

More important is the Italian MENTAL hardiness, the thinking power, the moral courage.

A. R. K.—"A" loses. Lord Cornwallis did not surrender to George Washington. Colonel Laurens, who conducted the negotiations, arranged matters so that Lord Cornwallis' sword should be received by General Lincoln, to reward that officer for the recruit that had been given him at the time of his surrender at Charleston.

Always accustomed to an active, outdoor life, he forgot that the was growing old, and one day he carelessly exposed himself during a long horseback ride through a wild snowstorm, and the result was the throat affection which, helped along by the terrible "remedies" of the time, such as bleeding, "cupping" and "blistering," carried him off.

The Status of Woman Suffrage in the United States Today

An Interesting and Comprehensive Review Written by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont.

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

We are able to publish here the substance of a letter written by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and read at the annual dinner of the International Women's Franchise Club in London. The letter was written because of Mrs. Belmont's inability to attend the dinner. It will interest American women and men, as it gives a concise and interesting review of the woman's suffrage situation in the United States at this moment.

Those who are interested in the woman suffrage movement will be interested in the names of those conspicuous in the International Women's Franchise Club. Some undoubtedly, even among the ardent suffragettes, will find a romantic interest in the title of these believers in equal rights. It will be observed that both Mrs. Belmont and her daughter, the Duchess of Marlborough, are among the active members. This is the list of officials of the club. An interesting lot of names, from the United States to Denmark.

Following is Mrs. Belmont's letter sent to the club expressing her inability to attend the annual convention, and giving an account of conditions in the United States:

Dear Friends:

It is with the deepest regret that I find myself unable to attend the annual dinner of the International Women's Franchise Club, of which I have the honor to be vice-president.

I know of nothing that would give me such real pleasure if it were within the possibilities, but as it is not, I must console myself with being present in spirit at least on this occasion.

I should like to come and rejoice with you in the progress of woman suffrage throughout the world and to tell you something of the movement in my own country, which I apprehend is not as thoroughly understood and appreciated as it ought to be, even by those who follow the cause of equal suffrage in its onward march.

In this country we have in our ten enfranchised States four million women eligible to vote for President of the United States, the highest office within the gift of the people. We are now endeavoring to evolve a plan by which these four million women may hold the balance of power at the next general elections and force the Democratic party, now in power, to incorporate a woman suffrage plank in its platform. Should the effort prove successful, it will be a matter of only the shortest possible time when universal suffrage will prevail throughout the length and breadth of the American Republic.

The Legislatures of four of the far Western States—Nevada, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota—have passed the bill providing for the submission to the electorate of the woman suffrage amendment. They will vote on it at the November elections, and prospects for favorable majorities are most encouraging.

In the great Commonwealth of Ohio, ranking among the most important of the nation, women have invoked the initiative and referendum law, which enables them to circulate a petition, and through this channel a vigorous campaign has been launched which we have every reason to believe will result in the enfranchisement of the women of the State next November. Nebraska and Missouri are also circulating petitions for the same purpose, and should they secure a sufficient number of signatures the suffrage amendment will be voted on at the November elections. In the event of victory, therefore, we shall add seven new stars to our American Suffrage Flag, making seventeen in all.

In addition to the foregoing, the United States Congress last year conferred upon the women of the Territory of Alaska the same voting right possessed by Alaska men. There is no presidential suffrage in American Territories, that being a right reserved by sovereign States. The Republican party of the Territory of Hawaii two years ago petitioned Congress to extend the right of franchise to Hawaiian women, most of whom are members of the Hawaiian Woman Suffrage Association and being excellent educational work.

The Legislatures of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Iowa have voted in favor of submitting the amendment to their voters, but the law in each of these requires the approval of two successive Legislatures to any and all measures before final action is taken at the polls. Meanwhile the most active campaigns are being waged in the four States referred to, although they will not come to a vote on the measure until the Autumn of 1915.

In April of last year a bill was introduced in both Houses of Congress to amend the Constitution of the United States so as to prevent any citizen from being deprived of the right of franchise because of sex. In June last this bill was reported favorably by the Senate Committee on Woman Suffrage, and it is not at all improbable that it will be voted on and passed during the present session. In which event the question will be submitted to each and all of the State Legislatures simultaneously, the result of which may possibly be the adoption of universal suffrage throughout the nation within the next two years in the form of an amendment to the National Constitution, the process by which the American negro became enfranchised.

Thus it will be seen that the women of this country, East and West, North and South, are breaking through traditional prejudice, tearing down the walls of conservatism, overcoming opposition, and building on the foundation of constitutional right, to the end that our country may not much longer remain divided against itself. We fondly call it the "Land of Liberty," and are determined that it shall be so in fact—a true democracy. Our slogan is votes for all the women of the United States, and we shall be satisfied with nothing but complete victory.

I mention these details to show that while our methods are peculiarly our own, they are adapted to our needs and our customs; to emphasize the fact that we are far from inactive, and that in no country in the world is equal suffrage progressing as steadily as in this. We regard the suffrage cause a world-wide issue, a bond connecting the women of all nations; that a victory in one section of the globe serves as an impetus to the movement everywhere.

When success crowns our efforts on this side of the Atlantic we rejoice in the knowledge of the influence which it will bring to bear on improving conditions in other lands; and when the women of Great Britain come into the political heritage which they so richly deserve, we of America will join heartily in the thanksgiving, realising that justice for one goes a long way in the direction of justice for all.

In the hope that we may meet together at the next annual dinner of the International Women's Franchise Club to celebrate suffrage victories in all parts of the civilized world, believe me,

Fraternally yours,
ALVA K. BELMONT,
(Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont.)
